Police, blacks clash

Tension brews in Soweto

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police fired cannisters of teargas to disperse thousands of Soweto blacks massed for the burial Saturday of a 17-year-old youth whose death was blamed by some blacks on a police beating.

A police spokesman said there were a few stoning incidents but no one was reported injured or arrested.

Witnesses said the mood at the funeral for Philemon Tloana was one of volatile anger, but for most of the day police kept their distance and no incidents were reported.

A police spokesman in Soweto, the sprawling back township 10 miles outside Johannesburg where more than one million blacks live, said the teargas was fired because police officials decided the crowd was getting too large.

The officials estimated the crowd at 15,000 and said it was feared they would not be able to contol the mass of people if any more gathered. Other witnesses estimated the crowd at 25,000.

Before teargas broke up the crowd, a white South African reporter, escorted to the graveside by black friends, said only the spark of a single incident was needed to make Soweto burn "as easily as a fire set in the tall dry grasslands surrounding the township."

High school students directed funeral traffic and nearly a dozen municipal buses were used as roadblocks to control the streams of cars with blacks.

At the graveside on the outskirts of Soweto mourners and spectators stood hundreds deep, witnesses said. One photographer estimated 25,000 blacks were massed at the cemetery and surrounding streets.

Tloana died during an incident June 15 when a store was being looted and a car firebombed in a Diepkloof shopping center. Witnesses said the youth collapsed after being beaten by police, but an autopsy by a state pathologist and a doctor appointed by Tloana's family reportedly revealed no assault marks on the body.

Several outbursts of violence have erupted in the sprawling township in the past week, fueled by memories of the bloody rioting of a year ago that took 600 lives across South Africa. Two blacks died and 23 were wounded in clashes with police Thursday.

Elsewhere in Africa:

—Marxist President Samora Machel of Mozambique said in a speech on the second anniversary of his country's independence from Portugal that it is under economic and military assault from imperialism, including raids from Rhodesia, that jeopardizes the country's freedom.

—The Lutheran World Federation, meeting in Dar Es Salaam, Tanzania, said its churches in southern Africa must reject racial segregation as a matter of faith. The resolution was adopted by an overwhelming vote, including those of South African delegates from all-white parishes.

—Ugandan President Idi Amin was quoted by the official Radio Uganda as denying an attempt was made to assassinate him one week ago. But he told a visiting American reporter his security forces had captured arms smuggled from Kenya and Tanzania, indicating some sort of plot to topple him.

Peace effort is challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is quickening its search for racial peace in subcontinental Africa to head off mounting turbulence in white-ruled South Africa, Rhodesia and Namibia.

But the U.S. effort is being challenged, on some levels, by South Africa, militarily the strongest state on the continent.

An overview of the situation, pieced together from information given last week by American and South African diplomats, disclosed:

—The South African government of Prime Minister John Vorster has set out directly to rally the backing of anti-Carter elements in this country for South Africa's rejection of a U.S. demand that a one-man one-vote system be introduced into South Africa.

—The government of Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith has reaffirmed its readiness to transfer power to a black majority regime by 1978 but only if certain tough conditions are fulfilled.

—Five key Western nations, including the United States, have insisted the United Nations must supervise and control the political and electoral transition to independence in Namibia (formerly South-West Africa) next year.

But South Africa, which runs the territory, has rejected U.N. "supervision and control" and is ready only to accept U.N. "observation." Additionally, Vorster has refused to withdraw South Africa's estimated 20,000 troops and airmen from the territory in advance of independence.

Meanwhile, violence persists in each of the three lands.

Against this background President Carter's envoys, using a combination of political persuasion, business pressures and direct diplomacy, have been focusing on South Africa as the key country in the region to bring about a radical transformation of its centuries-old racial policies. These policies are based on the permanent supremacy of white men.

Several significant developments have taken place behind the scenes:

—A news conference statement by Vice President Walter F. Mondale in Vienna on May 20 after talks with Vorster has been modified. Mondale had said then that the U.S. belief that there should be "full participation" by all South Africans in the political process means "every citizen should have the right to vote."

This was taken to mean he was urging a "one-man one-vote" system.

The U.S. position now seems to be that, without setting any timetable, the South Africans should progressively bring nonwhites into the political processes, in line with Carter's concepts of social justice and human dignity.

U.S. officials gave this new interpretation to South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha, according to his aides, in the past few days.

—More than 20 U.S. corporations, with a nod and a wink from the administration, have joined with an original dozen companies in a pledge to end segregation and to promote fair employment practices in their South African operations.

Democrats establish new group

More than 40 Sedalia and Pettis County Democrats met for a Saturday morning breakfast at the Ramada Inn to form a new organization designed to raise funds for the party's city and county committees.

Fourth Ward Councilman Ray Hendricks said earlier in the week the new group was designed to attract "persons who haven't been that involved in politics in the past, but who would like to get involved." At that time he also emphasized the group would not financially support a specific candidate, but would give funds to both committees to use for campaign expenses.

But familar names seemed to dominate the party's new organization and talk indicated the top priority of Democrats is to compile a financial war chest to help capture the mayor's post for the party, something which has alluded Democrats for about 20 years.

Third Ward Counciiman Carl Franklin nominated Hendricks as the president of the organization. Then, Second Ward Councilman Art Bethke made a motion that nominations cease. A second to that motion was quickly voiced and Hendricks was named president.

Hendricks told the group he was warned about the new organization being labeled a "party machine. But we need a machine, a better machine, so we will have a Democratic mayor," Hendricks said.

Eastern District Judge Russell McFatrich, Jerry Barr and Ken Norton were nominated for the post of vice-president. The three candidates left the room and a show of hands gave McFatrich the job. He received 19 votes to seven for both Barr and Norton.

Mrs. Pauline Jones, Mrs. James Mathewson and Mrs. Carol Joquel were then nominated as secretery. Mrs. Mathewson and Mrs. Jones declined and Mrs. Joquel, 1701 West 11th, was named secretery by acclamation.

Franklin then nominated Circuit Court Clerk Bill Lyles as treasurer, but Lyles declined, saying he intends to be a candidate in future elections and believed it improper to serve for that reason.

Norton, 27, 3303 South Park, a station installer for Southwestern Bell, was then nominated treasurer. No other nominations were made and Norton was named to the post by acclamation.

Drilling for water

Sedalia Water Department workers drilled this and several other holes in the street just east of Broadway and Engineer Saturday morning trying to locate a leak in an eight-inch water pipe that flooded that intersection about 4 a.m. Saturday morning. It took workers several hours to locate and repair the leak, because finding the leak is like finding a needle in a haystack, according to one of the workers.

Council paves way for Kelsey-Hayes Co.

The Kelsey-Hayes Co. came one step closer to getting a new manufacturing plant located in Sedalia Friday night, when the City Council adopted a city ordinance to hold a special $25 million industrial revenue bond election on July 19.

If voters pass the revenue bond issue, Kelsy-Hayes, which is the largest wheel-manufacturing firm in the country, plans to build a 275,000 square-foot building across from the Duke Manufacturing plant on West Main.

The council passed a resolution supporting the ordinance Monday at its regualar meeting, but could not adopt the ordinance then because the state Department of Commerce and Industrial Development had to first approve such an ordinance.

That approval was secured by Economic Development Director James Hamm Thursday in Jefferson City.

The plant, which would be financed by the revenue bonds, will employ between 200 and 250 persons and will manufacture 10 million wheels annually, when full operations begin in about three years.

In other action Friday night, the council approved the formation of a Sedalia-Pettis County Emergency Preparedness Council, made plans to have engineers determine the feasibility of restoring the old fire station next to the Municipal Building and adopted a measure requiring city job applicants to take aptitude tests.

Singular unpleasantness

Taxes may tax Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most politicians associate themselves with pleasant things, but Jimmy Carter is identifying himself more and more with a singular unpleasantness. Taxes.

That might not be good politics, even if Carter's effort is to ease the tax burden or to show that his own dealings with the Internal Revenue Service are above suspicion. The effort is particularly likely to be politically harmful if it's confusing.

After all, is it easy to understand someone who pays the Internal Revenue Service a penny more than he owes? Let alone $6,000?

Carter's gesture Friday was, of course, to make a point. Despite a 1976 gross income of $55,000, Carter's federal income tax forms showed he owed no tax because he had taken advantage of an investment tax credit that reduced his tax liability from $11,675 to zero.

But the President said he was donating $6,000 to the IRS, anyway.

But what exactly is the point? Is the $6,000 conscience money?

"No, I don't think so," says White House Press Secretary Jody Powell. But then he adds: "People who reap substantial benefits from this country ought to pay something back, even when the law does not require it in a particular case."

Carter himself said by way of explaining his $6,000 donation that he had a "strong feeling that a person should pay some tax on his income."

Does that mean Carter wants to revise the tax laws so that everyone with income must pay a tax?

No, again. Just people with "substantial income," Powell says.

Then is it safe to say Carter's discovery about what people like himself can do to escape taxes will give impetus to his tax reform effort?

No, again. "It probably shouldn't," Powell says, "except to draw attention to taxes generally." Powell says the President will not make tax reform decisions based on his own return.

The $6,000 Carter donated to the IRS in lieu of taxes is only "indicative of the President's general approach," Powell says.

To be more specific might give businessmen the notion that Carter might try to eliminate or curtail the investment tax credit.

That might turn off business plans to lay out money for job-producing plants and equipment. Besides, Powell says, Carter's tax revision program is still too far from completion for anyone to conclude anything about what its specific shape will be.

And so it ends in the same vagueness and confusion that has characterized

Carter concerned by reaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says surprising Soviet reaction against his human rights stand apparently is more of an obstacle to nuclear arms talks than he thought and there have been no steps toward agreement since negotiations last month in Geneva.

"There has been a surprising adverse reaction in the Soviet Union to our stand on human rights," Carter said in an interview made public Saturday by the White House. "We have never singled them the Russians out. I think I have been quite reticent in trying to publicly condemn the Soviets.

"I have never said anything except complimentary things about Mr. Leonid I. Brezhnev the Soviet president, for instance," Carter said in the interview, with a group of newspaper editors and broadcast news directors invited to the White House on Friday.

"But apparently that has provided a greater obstacle to other friendly pursuits, common goals, like in SALT, than I had anticipated."

Carter also disclosed that, in addition to the Soviet reaction against his human rights crusade, he has been surprised by three things as President.

Carter listed them as the complexity of some of the nation's problems; the time it will take to resolve some international questions "if they are solved"; and the amount of traveling Secretary of State Cyrus Vance must do to meet expectations created by his globe-trotting predecessor, Henry A. Kissinger.

"The secretary of state has found," Carter said, "that because of the past expectations built up primarily under Secretary Kissinger, foreign governments expect the American secretary of state to come now, and his refraining from doing so and staying here in Washington is not well-accepted by foreign nations."

At wit's end

Take it along

By ERMA BOMBECK

Boy, the Egyptians had the right idea. When they went they took it all with them, right to the tomb.

A few have tried to revive the custom. There was a woman in New Jersey who was buried with her telephone. (Talk about cruel! Her husband included a 75-foot extension cord!) There was a golfer in Florida who requested he be buried with his clubs on the first green. His will said he always wanted a permanent "hole in one." A couple of months ago in California, a woman requested she be buried in her lace nightgown at the wheel of her Ferrari "with the seat slanted comfortably."

It got me to thinking, why should I leave my untold wealth to a second wife? Let her amass her own fortune like I did. That is why I am insisting that the following items go with me when I go.

My book of sitters' telephone numbers: This is a first edition that I wear at all times taped to my bra. I have kids in there who will work for 50 cents an hour and all the food that doesn't attack them first. Also, a sweet, little elderly woman who cleans the oven when I'm gone and one woman who believes, "There is no such thing as a rotten kid. He just needs a laxative."

A letter from the book club telling me of my cancellation: You can't buy letters like this and it took me four years of correspondence, plus the purchase of a Xerox machine to get it. Besides, I don't want to take any chances. If they keep sending me books, I've got proof.

The television warranty: Let her go crazy trying to explain she knows there is still a year or so to go on the picture tube, but she just can't find the serial number, and it sounds crazy, but the first wife took it with her.

An 1801 antique hatpin: This little antique is unequaled in value and hard to replace. It's the only thing that unlocks the bathroom door from the outside when one of the kids has been in there a day and a half.

One half of a Master's Degree: My husband earned it, but half of it is mine under community poverty. It represented our trip to Europe, a new sofa, screens on the back porch, a sailboat and a garbage compressor.

Eighteen books of green stamps: I didn't buy "specials on day-old fish" and survive 180 Double Stamp Days of combat just to have the second wife get the ping-pong table. If I can't feel the exhilaration of turning in all those books at the redemption center, no one else will.

The rest she can have . . . the kids who eat every three hours, the husband who, if she cooks Dinosaur Hocks with green beans for dinner, had it for lunch . . . the lemon-scented house in the suburbs . . . she can even have my car.

Of course, I'll take along the only set of keys for it.

River freight nearing record

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Total freight shipped on the Missouri River through June 15 shows that tonnage totals are approaching the record-setting 1976 season in which more than 3 million tons were shipped, the Army Corps of Engineers said.

Brig. Gen. William Read said that by June 15, 877,232 tons had been shipped between Sioux City, Iowa, and the mouth, only 10.68 per cent below the total for that date last year.

The Sioux City to Rulo, Neb., portion of the river had carried 42,568 tons by June 15, only slightly less than the 511,442 tons shipped between Rulo and the mouth just above St. Louis, he said.

Sedalia man arraigned on drug charges

A rural Sedalia man was arraigned on felony charges of possession of marijuana in Magistrate Court Friday, while Pettis County sheriff's deputies traveled to Leavenworth, Kan., to return a man to Sedalia to face felony stealing charges filed against him Thursday.

Nicholas Timothy Dominque, 23, Route, 2, was arrested on the drug charges after the sheriff's department, assisted by Sedalia police and the Highway Patrol, searched his home about 12:30 p.m. Friday on a warrant obtained on information supplied by informants, according to Sheriff Emmett Fairfax.

Three pounds of marijuana, 10 rifles and shotguns and four saddles were confiscated in the search, Fairfax said. Serial numbers on two of the guns were traced to a Saline County theft and the four saddles were stolen from the Walter Lacey residence, Route 1, Smithton, on May 12, Fairfax said.

Domingue remains in the county jail in lieu of $5,000 bond. He was one of 23 persons arrested in drug raids Feb. 25, following his alleged sale of $75 worth of marijuana to police undercover officer William McGhee on Feb. 15. At the time of his arrest Friday he was free on $5,000 bond in connection with the prior arrest.

Deputies returned Michael J. Rhodes to Sedalia after he was arrested by Leavenworth authorities attempting to sell some furniture allegedly stolen June 20 from the K-Mart store here.

Rhodes, who is expected to be arraigned Monday morning, waived extradition to Missouri to face the charges, according to Fairfax.

Weekend accidents claim four lives

Four persons have been killed in traffic accidents across Missouri this weekend, including one woman from Alabama.

Carol Grant Wilson, 33, Birmingham, Ala., died after she apparently fell asleep at the wheel Saturday morning and her car plummeted off Interstate 55 about two miles south of Scott City.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said the Wilson car went down an embankment and across a creek before crashing into another dirt embankment. Three other persons were injured. The accident occurred about 7:20 a.m.

John Terry Limbaugh, 19, rural Millersville, was killed about 5:15 p.m. Saturday when his motorcycle crashed into an oncoming car along a rainslick curve on Missouri 72 about 12 miles west of Jackson.

☆ Taxes

many of Carter's attempts to deal with taxes.

During the primaries, Carter seemed to suggest eliminating the deduction homeowners are allowed for their mortgage interest. A Carter opponent, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, accused him of advocating an irresponsible change.

"A gross distortion," Carter shot back. He said he would do nothing to shift the tax burden to homeowners, particularly those with lower incomes. But then Carter also said "I will consider" proposing elimination of the mortgage interest deduction as part of a broader plan to lower rates.

Then, in a campaign interview, candidate Carter urged a tax overhaul "to shift a substantial increase toward those who have the higher incomes" and reduce levies on lower-and-middle income taxpayers.

Asked what was "higher" Carter said: "I don't know. I would take the mean or median level of income and anything above that would be higher and anything below that would be lower."

A reporter then pointed out that the "median family income today is somewhere around $12,000. Somebody earning $15,000 a year is not what people commonly think of as rich ..."

Carter interjected: "I understand. I can't answer that question because I haven't gone into it."

Republicans claimed Carter had advocated increasing the taxes of half the American people.

That, said Powell, was a typical Republican distortion.

Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's chief adviser on issues, later said that increases would apply to the wealthy, and certainly not to people earning $12,000 or $15,000 a year. But he said it would take further study to determine the level of income at which taxes would go up.

That level still hasn't been established.

Carter said Wednesday he expects to have his tax reform package complete before the year is out. But he said that so far all he has is "a series of options."

Recently, Carter has gotten entangled in other tax issues, national and personal, each touched by contradiction or confusion.

There was the $50 rebate, part of his economic stimulus package. Carter pledged a mighty fight to pass it. Not long afterward, he declared the economy no longer needed the rebate — and he scrapped it.

Then there was his own tax audit. Early on the day it was learned that the IRS was auditing Carter's 1975 tax return, aides said the audit had in effect been invited by Carter's accountant.

Later in the day they said they couldn't agree among themselves whether it was a Carter associate or an IRS representative who initiated the audit.

Then there was the matter of when he filed his 1976 income tax return. Carter himself told reporters he had filed his 1976 return after an initial deadline extension from the IRS.

But then Powell said no, it hadn't been filed, that Carter had been mistaken. Someone, Powell said, perhaps Mrs. Carter, had taken advantage of another extension to hold the return for further review.

That someone turned out to be White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz.

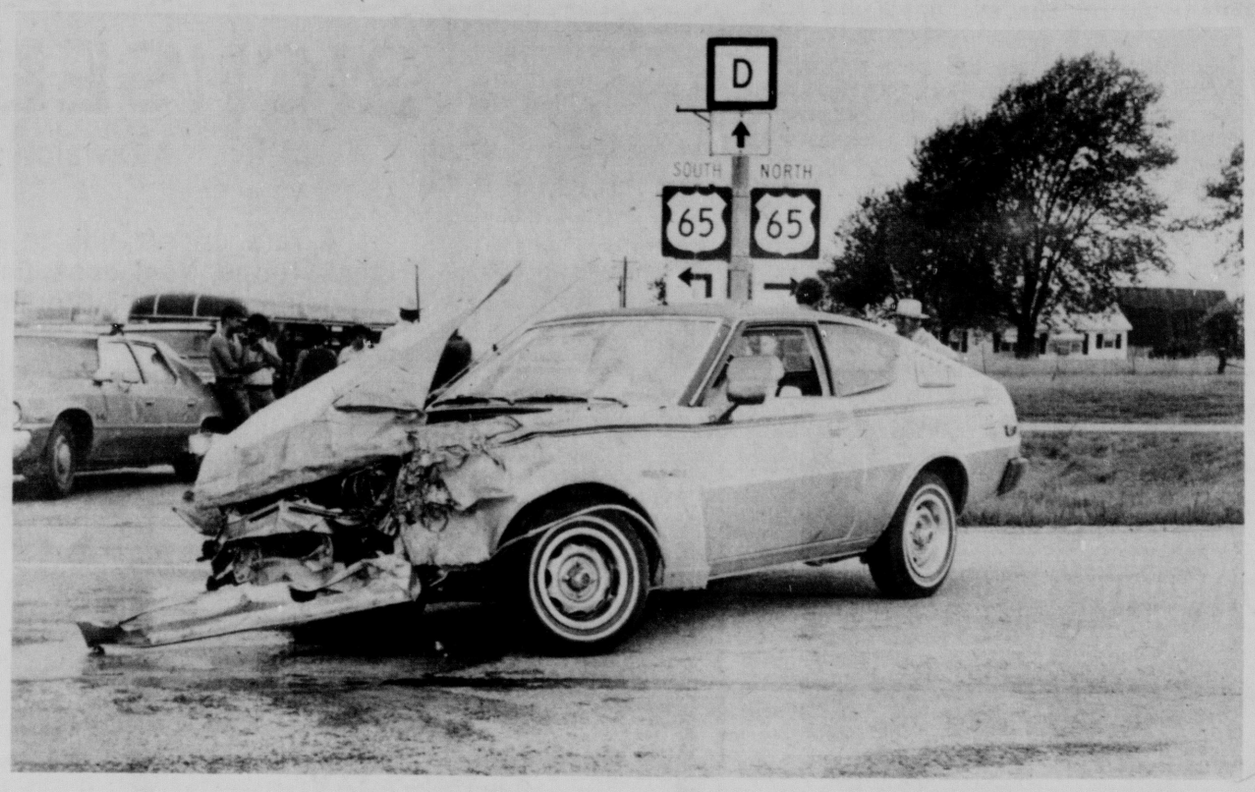
Whatever frustrations to understanding these confusions present, when the 1976 return was finally filed and Carter's $6,000 donation to Uncle Sam was disclosed, one thing became abundantly clear.

Sen. Ryan named to insurance panel

State Sen. John C. Ryan, a Sedalia Republican, has been appointed by Senate President Pro Tem Norman L. Merrell to an interim committee studying insurance problems.

Merrell, a Monticello Democrat, acted on the basis of resolutions passed on the final day of the legislative session.

Merrell also appointed committees to study problems connected with urban affairs, the school lunch program and product liability.



Highway collision

This is what remained of Michael D. Duffey's car after he allegedly failed to halt at a stop sign where Route D and Route J intersect North Highway 65 just south of Interstate 70 about 7:25 p.m. Saturday. According to the Highway Patrol, Duffey, 19, Sweet Springs, was heading east on Route D, failed to stop and ran into a car driven northbound on Highway 65 by John B. Hopkins, Auxvasse, Mo. The only person hurt in the two-car collision was Mrs. Helen Hopkins, who was treated for a fractured rib at Bothwell Hospital and released. Duffey was arrested for failing to stop at the intersection. He posted bond at the Pettis County jail shortly after the wreck and was released.

Posse continues search for accused murderer

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — They think he's still out there, wandering the densely wooded limestone foothills of the Ozarks. The posse doggedly hunts the man accused of sexually assaulting and killing three Girl Scouts nearly two weeks ago.

Saturday morning, about 150 lawmen and a handful of volunteer citizens continued their search for Gene Leroy Hart, an escaped convict who has been charged in the deaths. Officers have said Hart is a native of the area and is a crafty and cunning backwoodsman.

On Friday, about 400 persons — including the father of one of the victims — helped in the search. But most of them were sent home later because authorities said inexperienced hunters were hindering professional efforts to find clues that might lead to Hart.

Police have advised residents of the farms, ranches and homes to stay in their houses and keep the doors locked. Many are frightened.

"If they don't catch him, what's he going to do next?" wondered one housewife in this northeastern Oklahoma area. "What do we do next? Where do we go from here? We can't just hibernate.

And, from the locked security of her nearby home, Mrs. Jim English said:

"You feel more conscious of this thing at night. At night you don't know what's coming through the woods."

The manhunt is in a 10-square-mile area about three miles from the Girl Scout camp where, with his footsteps muffled by a thunderstorm, the killer struck on June 13.

On Thursday, three counts of first-degree murder were filed against the convicted rapist who escaped nearly four years ago from the Mayes County jail at nearby Pryor.

More than half an inch of rain fell late Friday, washing out old tracks but also helping by making new ones more visible.

Temperatures rising toward 90 and humidity above 80 per cent made the tick-infested woods a steambath for the searchers and those standing by at Camp Scott, where the girls were slain.

☆ Council

After studying a recommendation by Pettis County Civil Defense director Richard Orendorff for several weeks, the council voted to let the city participate in a joint civil defense operation with the county.

The 13-member preparedness council will be co-chaired by Third Ward Democrat Russell Bellamy and a unnamed County Court judge. The council will oversee rescue and relief operations here in such disasters as the May 4 tornado or any other civil defense emergencies.

Also Friday night, Planning and Management director Ron Scott told the council the cost of having a structural engineer assess the feasibility of restoring the old fire station would be between $2,000 and $3,000.

The council recently voted 4-3 not to destroy the building until at least Aug. 15, a deadline for concerned citizens to gather the funds needed for the restoration.

Several councilmen thought the $2,000 to $3,000 figure was prohibitive, but City Counselor Bob Fritz told the council he knew of two local engineers who would probably look at the structure at no cost to the city.

The council approved Fritz's offer and designated him to pursue the engineer's study.

The council also voted 7-1 to accept an offer by the local Employment Security Office for helping the city select future employes.

That office will give applicants a battery of apptitude tests, which will help the city in determining which persons are best qualified for certain city positions, according to Monte Dennis, a representative of the employment office here.

☆ Democrats

At the meeting's outset, Hendricks said, "My whole thinking on this organization goes back to last year's mayoral campaign. It was hard to raise money then, so we'll do it a little at a time now," Hendricks explained.

"I know I can and you can, come once a month and put out $5 a month," Hendricks said.

"And I don't mean to imply that the election of Carl Franklin as mayor is the sole purpose of this group — it is for the city and county committees," he explained.

Franklin was narrowly defeated by Mayor Allen Hawkins in a special mayoral election last August.

Franklin told the group he wanted to clarify the organization's function. "I am leaving my options open, there are plenty of qualified Democrats on the council who might want to run for mayor," he explained. Also, he said, "This money will be used in the general election for all candidates, not for me, if I am a candidate in the primary."

"There is, however, little doubt that Franklin will emerge from the Democratic primary as that party's candidate for mayor. No other Democratic councilmen have indicated an interest in challenging Hawkins and all have, at one time or another, told the Democrat-Capital that Franklin "is the man for the job."

Other well-known officials at the organizational meeting included First Ward Councilman Gary Dey, Second Ward Councilman Robert Morris, Deputy Jim Lawson and Planning and Management director Ron Scott.

Although party supporters put off naming the organization, they decided to have monthly fund-raising breakfast meetings. Part of the cost of each meal goes to the party's city and county committees, Hendricks explained.

The cost of Saturday's meal was $5 for each person, and two dollars of that amount will go to the committee campaign funds.

The next meeting is at 7:30 a.m. July 19 at the State Fair Motor Inn, South Highway 65.

Another year, a little fatter

What's yellow instead of green, fatter and has your number? Why the new Sedalia-Knob Noster-LaMonte telephone book, of course.

The July, 1977, directory, being distributed by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., contains 280 pages, a dozen more than last year's version.

Sedalia's white page listings are contained on 79 pages, four more than last year. Knob Noster has grown from 17 to 19 pages, while LaMonte stays the same at five pages.

The yellow pages also have grown. This year's directory has 162 advertisement pages, compared to 156 last year. Both the 1976 and 1977 directories contain a couple pages of phone company advertising and 13 pages of customer information.

A-1 Appliance has retained its place as the first listing in the Sedalia section, followed by A-1 Mid-State Storage, A-1 Television Service and A-1 Tire Service.

At the other end, there's a newcomer. Donna Zweimiller, Route 4, is the final listing, a couple of letters behind last year's trailer, Zurcher's Jewelers.

This year's yellow cover is under a photograph of sugar maples in a Missouri autumn.

County jobless rate up to 5.4 per cent

Pettis County's unemployment rate stood at 5.4 per cent last month, according to estimates from the Missouri Division of Employment Security.

This is somewhat higher than the state rate, which was 4.7 per cent for May.

Jobless rates in surrounding counties for May:

Benton, 3.7 per cent; Cooper, 2.8; Henry, 3.9; Lafayette, 3.3; Moniteau, 5.4; Morgan, 5.3; Saline, 2.2.

Question

What are the duties What are your duties as a funeral director?

Answer Since the beginning of time close friends have been called upon at time of death to carry out the necessary religious and legal requirements of burial. Our funeral establishment actually evolved from this need on the part of people to turn to someone thoroughly qualified. Although our facilities have been continually updated throughout the years, our responsibility to function as a friend has remained constant.

We are charged with arranging the details of a funeral service. Death certificates, Social Security and Veterans forms, newspaper notices, burial or transit permits, cemetery authorization forms—all are routinely processed by us.

A funeral is essentially a religious ceremony. Because of this fact we must maintain a constant awareness of the funeral policies of all religious denominations. In our present day pattern of living we furnish the place, the technical knowledge and the mobility required to assist the family and the clergyman in the proper conduct of a funeral service.

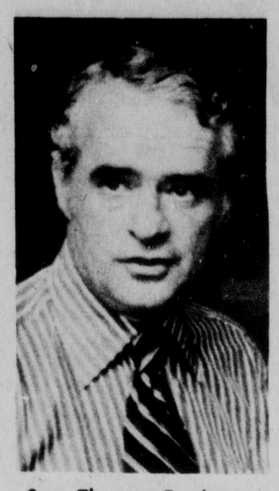
Carter to recommend arms sale to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to recommend the sale to Israel of some $115 million in tactical military missiles and vehicles, an administration source said Saturday night.

The sale, first sought by Israel last December, involves 700 armored personnel carriers, 200 TOW wire-guided anti-tank missiles and 15 tank bulldozers, the source said.

An interview with Missouri's senior senator



Sen. Thomas Eagleton

Cyrene Dear, of The Democrat-Capital's Washington bureau, recently interviewed Sen. Thomas Eagleton of Missouri. The following is her report.--Ed.

WASHINGTON — The senior senator from Missouri, Democrat Thomas Francis Eagleton, has come down from Room 6235 in the Dirksen Building to the first floor, Room 1209, by virtue of his seniority. His more spacious redecorated office includes plants, modern art, small workrooms for the staff, and, on his own shelves, a beautiful collection of Minton English china plates.

Q — After nine years in the Congress, what are the most important things you have done for Missouri?

A — I cannot think of them offhand, but I did retain the St. Louis airport for the state and saved the Agriculture Research Station for St. Louis, instead of having it go to Omaha. I got the propane amendment bill guarantee for Missouri farmers which gave them priority prices. These to mention a few.

Q — What are some of the state's most important problems which should be or have been aided by the federal government?

A — Jobs, especially in the larger cities. A total of $385,000 has been allotted to Sedalia for a public works program; rural and small town housing for the elderly, including two in Pettis County, located in Green Ridge and LaMonte (under construction) — these are row houses with small open areas in front and are already in great demand; as chairman of the agriculture subcommittee, we are seeking to find the cause and arrest of the disease nemocode, which attacks the important soybean crop in Missouri; and cooperating with the International Trade Commission, especially the shoe industry for which the President is trying to establish quotas which would relegate more of the industry to the U.S.; the recent tornado damage which was managed so efficiently by Francis Tobin of the FDAA.

Q — Can you recall how many amendments and bills you have sponsored?

A — No, they are too numerous to mention. I have become very selective in sponsoring them. I don't spread myself so thin. I am pleased that the flood insurance plan has been adopted, and, although one military base may be closed, I am certain Whiteman will be retained. I am very concerned about the abuse of PX/commissaries in the military. Do you know there are 250,000 civilian employes in the military?

Q — How do you stand on the pull-out of U.S. troops from Korea and Europe?

A — First on Korea. It would be a very gradual pull-out and very cautious over a period of at least three or four years and should be replaced by native South Koreans. In Europe, none at present. Because of some of the difficulties we are having with the Soviet Union, some resolutions have been made through the mutual balanced force reductions, although no specific number has been mentioned.

Q — There have been some bussing problems in Missouri. What is your position on bussing?

A — There are two kinds of bussing. I support the Constitution, the federal court's equal protection clause for doing away with racial segregation. Secondly, I am in favor of neighborhood schools where children need not be bussed long distances for the sake of integration. I support magnet schools which specialize in science, arts, vocations, etc., where students can apply for admissions. They may or may not have to be bussed.

Q — What about the ERA?

A — I support the ERA but do not interfere with the state's legislative problems.

Q — How is the President doing? Are you a part of his base in Congress?

A — I support the President. I do not always agree with him but I think he is right on energy, a balanced budget, reorganization of government, decreasing some of the agencies, inflation, unemployment and others.

Conflict of interest question

PSC to receive Fain report Monday

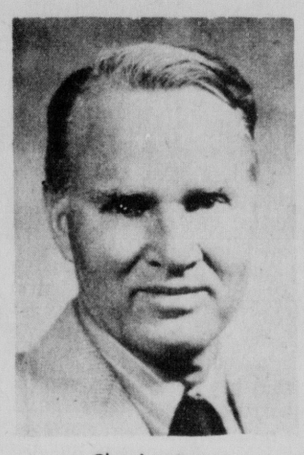
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Public Service Commission will receive a report Monday on whether former Commissioner Charles Fain can legally represent a trucking company in a PSC regulatory matter.

The commission asked staff attorney Paul Phillips on Friday to review commission rules on the issue of practicing before the commission after leaving it and report his findings.

The primary commission rule follows closely the state conflict of interest law and the Canons of Ethics for attorneys, however, and Fain says he has violated neither.

Cole County Prosecutor James McHenry says his office is taking no interest in the matter. Harold Barrick of the Missouri Bar declined comment.

On April 1, while still a member of the commission, Fain voted to give Beaufort temporary permission for expansion of its operating authority for 90 days.



Charles Fain

Fain's term expired May 22.

Less than a month later, Fain was hired by Phillip Transit Lines Inc., to oppose the request of a competing Trucking firm, Beaufort Transfer Co., for permanent expansion of its operating authority.

Under state law, for a two-year period after leaving office no public official can receive a fee for service in a matter in which he had a direct concern and participation while in office. Fain said the request for temporary authority was a completely distinct case from the permanent request.

The commission rule uses the exact language of the state law except that it also incorporates language from the Canons of Ethics. The rule also prohibits Public Service Commission employes from ever taking part in such matters, eliminating the two-year limit in the law. The ethics canon titled "a lawyer should avoid even the appearance of professional impropriety" prohibits an attorney from accepting private employment in matters on which he has acted in a judicial capacity or over which he had substantial reponsibility while a public employe. Violation of those prohibitions could lead to disciplinary action by the courts.

As a guideline, that canon says that "on occasion, ethical conduct of a lawyer may appear to laymen to be unethical" and warns against situations that could create misunderstanding. But the guideline also says attorneys should not fail to carry out their duty to clients or the public "merely because the full discharge of his obligation may be misunderstood or may tend to subject him or the legal profession to criticism."

Barrick said the guidelines only represent the objectives the profession strives for, and disciplinary action can be taken only for violations of specific prohibitions outlined in the canons.

Jobs picture improves

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Despite an influx of new job seekers into the state labor market last month, unemployment declined, the state Division of Employment Security reported.

The jobless rate dropped from 4.9 per cent in April to 4.7 per cent in May, a decline of 3,000 persons without jobs even though the work force increased nearly 26,000 persons to almost 2.17 million.

The employment picture last month was also significantly better than it was a year earlier, when those out of work totaled more than 125,000.

The majority of the monthly gain in employment was concentrated in the nonmanufacturing sector where seasonal increases in trade and services occurred, the division said.

MU football tickets hiked 50 cents a game

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri University football fans will soon be paying an extra 50 cents a game to watch the Tigers, as the result of action Friday by the Board of Curators.

The curators approved a plan to add 10,530 more seats at Faurot Field in Columbia after the 1977 season. The south-end seats will be financed by a 50-cent surcharge on tickets to all home games.

The board also agreed to pay $1.8 million to the Hartford Insurance Group for one year of liability insurance. The new policy, which takes effect July 1, cost $249,700 more than the current policy.

But R.E. Marriott, university insurance director, said the contract would give the university time to develop its own insurance program, which is expected to be implemented in July 1978.

The policy will protect the university from losses on malpractice suits at the university medical center and on other claims involving negligence of the professional staff.

The curators also elected Rex. Z. Williams of Rolla to succeed Van O. Williams of Liberty as board president. The members rotate the presidency yearly.

Dr. James C. Olson, university president, told the curators the university still is awaiting an appraisal on an 8,000-acre tract of land near Weldon Springs before beginning negotiations to sell it to the Missouri Department of Conservation. The land was a gift from the federal government after World War II.

The sale would be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

Olson said the university also would cooperate with the Coordinating Board for Higher Education in a study on creating a school of optometry. But he said the university's other professional schools would have to get the money they need before a new school could be established.

CMSU regents are still undecided over KMOS

Contrary to earlier indications, the Central Missouri State University board of regents apparently has not definitely decided to accept Sedalia's KMOS-TV station as an educational station, according to two persons who attended this month's meeting of the CMSU board of regents.

Eastern District Judge Russell McFatrich and Mrs. W.C. Jones, LaMonte, who are leading efforts to retain KMOS as a local commercial station, said they were told by several board members and CMSU President Warren Lovinger "that they had not decided whether to accept KMOS-TV or not." It was reported to The Democrat-Capital last April that the board of regents had voted unanimously to authorize the school to pursue the purchase of the commercial station.

Lovinger was not available for comment to explain the apparent contradiction. After hearing Mrs. Jones and McFatrich briefly explain their reasons for wanting the commercial station retained, board vice president Al Brooks, Kansas City, asked the two to prepare a report describing their efforts to retain the station and itemizing why they feel it should be kept in Sedalia.

Brooks also was not available for comment.

In their report to the board, McFatrich and Mrs. Jones stated that 1,606 signatures have been obtained on petitions calling for keeping the station. A primary reason why the station should be retained, Mrs. Jones wrote, it that its loss "would be a severe blow to Pettis County" and particularly to its "senior citizens, low-income and minorities who cannot afford cable television." Also, it was noted, rural areas do not have access to cable service.

The report also listed many local services provided by KMOS including covering local events and providing local information to residents, which would largely be lost if KMOS were to be taken over by the college as an educational station.

"Senior citizens have worked and paid taxes many years," Mrs. Jones wrote. "Now they would like to relax and be entertained. How can they be entertained by an educational station?"

The report also noted that retention of KMOS has been endorsed by the Sedalia Building Trades Council and that many merchants cooperated in the petition drive. Persons signing the petition included citizens of Pettis, Johnson, Saline, Benton, Morgan and Cooper Counties.

Mrs. Jones also told the board she had presented copies of the petitions recently to Rep. Ike Skelton and that she and McFatrich also recently discussed the situation with Sen. Thomas Eagleton when Eagleton was in Clinton recently. Original copies of the petitions have been sent to the Federal Communications Commission.

Mrs. Jones closed her report to the regents with a charge that Mid-America Television Co. (which owns KMOS) hopes to sell the station to the college so that it (Mid-America) "can have a tax break because of the gift to a non-profit organization."

Court ruling has no effect on Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling Friday permitting aid to parochial schools will have no effect in Missouri, according to state officials.

The Missouri constitution does not permit the use of tax dollars for books and other materials for parochial schools, said P.J. Newell, assistant education commissioner.

State Treasurer James Spainhower said he interpreted the ruling to mean states could authorize such aid if they wished but were not required to do so.

Blue law vote set for Nov. 8

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A referedum on repeal of the Missouri blue law in Jackson, Clay and Platte counties has been tentatively scheduled for Nov. 8.

The issue will allow voters in the three Kansas City area counties to decide whether to lift the ban on Sunday sales of non-essential items.

The announcement of the vote date came Friday after nearly 40 political leaders from the three counties discussed strategy, financing and timing of the special election.

Wilkes-Barre still fighting scars left by flood

EDITOR'S NOTE — When Hurricane Agnes struck the Northeast on June 22, 1972, one of the hardest hit towns was Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where flood waters reached the second stores of many houses. A reporter revisiting Wyoming Valley finds that the effects of the disaster linger.

By JULIE FREDERICKSE
Associated Press Writer

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Even five years after Hurricane Agnes, people in this town divide their era into "before the flood" and "after the flood."

The flood left the city of 65,000 with more than $1 billion in damages, with physical and mental scars that still are readily apparent.

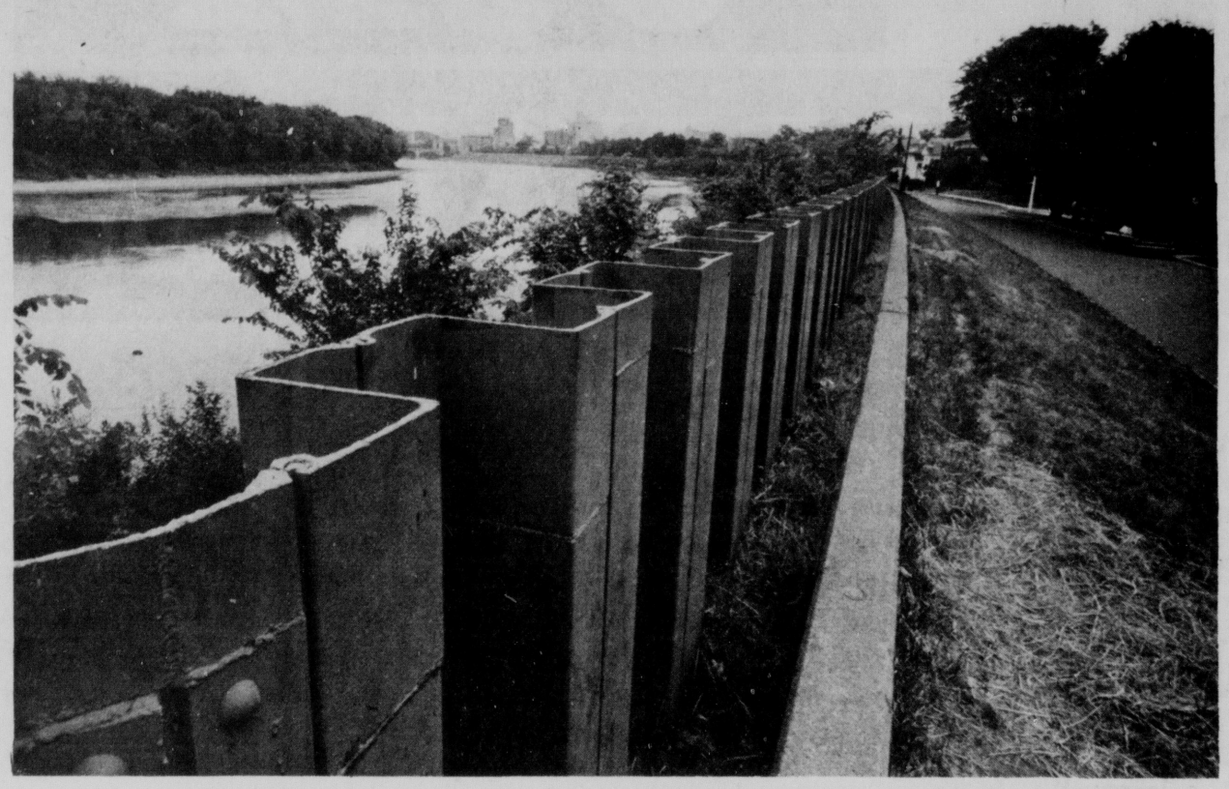
"It'll never be over," says Donna Miles, a department store sales manager. "We've rearranged our house so our valuable furniture is stored on the second floor. The minute the river rises, it all moves up to the attic or out of the valley to friends."

"You could see the long-term effects in Eloise," says contractor Tom Bell, referring to a 1975 hurricane — three years after Agnes — that brought heavy rains but no flooding in the Wyoming Valley, thanks to reinforced, higher dikes on the Susquehanna River. "I never saw so many rented trucks. People were packing up and getting out."

In the '72 calamity, about 100,000 persons were left homeless in the Susquehanna flood. Most were housed in trailers and campers provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Only three families live in the trailers today, but there are plenty of other reminders.

"The flood has become an historical date," says psychiatric social worker J. Warren Yarnal. "You can hardly go a day in this town without hearing someone talk about 'before the flood' or 'after the flood.'"



Wall against the water

The Susquehanna River flows quietly through the Wyoming Valley outside Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The steel wall bisecting the scene is part of the legacy of Hurricane Agnes, which spawned the flood disaster of 1972.

(AP)

A temporary bridge still spans the Susquehanna. Rubble-filled lots and condemned buildings dot the town. Several streets remain closed to traffic. Elementary school children attend classes in a temporary quonset hut-like structure. The Wilkes-Barre public square is torn up, and the central business district is being rebuilt.

In Chamber of Commerce terminology, all of the flood-related repair is called "redevelopment." While larger chain stores are pleased with the modernization that will allow the central city to compete with suburban shopping malls, many small businessmen say the effort has not meant progress for them.

"I don't know what's been worse for this area — the flood or redevelopment," says lawyer George Ritchie, who, like many downtown workers, must detour around various construction sites to get to his office overlooking the public square. "Redevelopment is killing the little guy."

"Between redevelopment and SBA, they put me out of business," says printer Jake Sirotkin.

Of the $800 million the federal Small Business Administration spent on flood-related reconstruction in Pennsylvania, nearly $500 million went to Wilks-Barre. Like more than half of the city's homeowners and small businessmen, Sirotkin was able to get a loan from the SBA to rebuild his home and business. But the Wilkes-Barre Redevelopment Agency tore down the block where his print shop was and erected a new building, charging four times the previous rent. Sirotkin's business failed. He suffered a heart attack. Now he's put a "For Sale" sign in front of the totally rebuilt house where his four children grew up.

While flood victims expressed gratitude for the favorable terms of their special SBA disaster loans — one per cent interest and a $5,000 "forgiveness" — many question the wisdom of the federal policy that encouraged renovation rather than relocation. Federal disaster loans were responsible for the reconstruction of so many homes in the hardest-hit south Wilkes-Barre area that the neighborhood is referred to as a "government reservation."

"Too many people were forced into massive indebtedness, to reconstruct devastated buildings that shouldn't have been rebuilt, in areas where they would have preferred not to remain," said Fred Anderson, a regional coordinator for HUD in the disaster relief and redevelopment effort during 1972-74. "I feel that the growth of this area would have been much longer-lived had there been more judicious decisions about re-use of the flood plain."

The Flood Victims Action Council, which claims more than 2,000 members in Pennsylvania and New York, lobbied for legislation to preclude forced rebuilding in the flood plain and provide better long-range flood protection.

"All redevelopment did was to pour a lot of money into a lot of pockets in the center city," complained one member. "The government's free ride for big business has only increased our tax burden. Our industry hasn't picked up, and the lot of the average citizen hasn't improved."

Despite all the complaints, Wyoming Valley's residents point with pride to what they consider one positive effect of the disaster: The strong family and community support that helped them survive.

"I was amazed at the resilience of the people," said social worker Yarnal.

Psychologist Carl Nitsche, who studied the psychological effects of the 1972 flooding, found relatively few psychic problems, most relating to the disruption of the environment in the flood-damaged communities. Follow-up counseling has confirmed the value of mutual psychological support among flood victims, he says.

"The support network in some of the hardest-hit communities is so strong that the few who were fortunate enough to escape serious flooding practically feel like pariahs," Dr. Nitsche says.

Residents still debate whether a similar disaster could happen again.

"We're still living in a flood plain," says Anderson, the former disaster relief official. "While people are growing more confident that the river will never flood that way again, because we now have a couple more feet of dike, I'm still worried. I think that as development increases up river, there will be more and more run-off water, and sooner or later this valley will flood again. The worst part is, I don't think we'll survive another disaster."

Birds in residence

The Phoenix Nest
Edited by Martin Levin

By DERECK WILLIAMSON

Noisy birds have emerged in record numbers this season. They can be seen everywhere, scratching at the ground and hacking at the trees. Their distinctive calls can be heard for great distances.

Since the nature columnists seem to be ignoring them for some strange reason, here are the names and brief descriptions of the 10 most common types:

Orange-Beaked Backhoe — A large ground bird that digs long trenches in search of goodness knows what. Can be identified by its wide beak, and by its curious movement. It backs across the ground, leaving a trench in front of it. Growls, coughs, and groans all day long. Extremely messy, it deposits large mounds of earth wherever it goes.

Whopping Big Crane — Builds towering metal nests near major highways. Picks up huge I-beams and carefully fits them in place. Prefers industrial parks where it is protected. Is in no danger of extinction; in fact, large Cranes are often seen with smaller ones at the same location. Call: a low grunt, or a high screech. Sometimes both.

Multitoothed Woodhacker — Attacks trees. Much smaller than any of the others, the Woodhacker is by far the noisiest and most common of all the new birds. Can be heard for miles on a normally-quiet summer morning. Is easily identified by its angry call — an ear-splitting snarl. Is the nation's principal defoliator. The gypsy moth isn't even a close second.

Roadblocking Bucket-creeper — Browses among the tops of utility poles. Moves its head jerkily, while its big yellow body blocks most of the roadway. Has conspicuous orange patches which appear to blink. This is one of the few birds that makes little noise. A related species prefers to browse in treetops, in the company of the Multitoothed Woodhacker. The latter makes enough noise for both of them.

Brash Brushgobbler — A squat, inconspicuous bird of prey. Idles at roadside, emitting a low hum, until it suddenly devours a mouthful of tree branches with a terrifying "ARRRGHH!" Deposits chiplike droppings, said to be useful as a plant mulch.

Broadbladed Earth-Eater — Roars purposefully and powerfully through fields and woods, pushing down trees and overturning earth in search of currency. Makes enough noise to be heard half a mile away. When backing up, makes piercing beep beep beep beep which can be heard for two miles.

Tirechirping Dual-Piper — Nocturnal bird. Unlike the others, it does not work. Frequents quiet residential streets between the hours of midnight and 3 a.m. Flocks of three or more like to rumble slowly along the street in line abreast, until they are directly in front of a dwelling. Then they all suddenly scream, screech, and scramble. A frequently-hunted bird, but very hard to catch.

Flashing Fuzzwarbler — Bright plumage, easy to identify. Wails and screeches through the same quiet residential street, half an hour after Tirechirping Dual-Pipers have departed for another town.

Red-Capped Cyclesnarler — Harmless amusing smaller bird, destructive only to itself. (Not to be confused with a louder, but rarer Winter cousin, the Blue-Hooded Snowsnarler.) Darts from place to place, making variable-pitched buzzing sound. Cyclesnarlers often leave travelled roadways, take off across bumpy fields, and fall on their sides. Sometimes they disappear into Orange-Beaked Backhoe trenches. Aggressive for their size, they have been known to attack Tirechirping Dual-Pipers, Flashing Fuzzwarblers, and even Broadbladed Earth-Eaters. They never learn.

Even split on Hatch Act

Sound Off

QUESTION — The University of Missouri has asked for a rehearing on a federal appeals court decision that requires it to grant official recognition to a campus homosexual group. Do you support the MU curators in their opposition to recognizing such a group?

Sound Off is a regular feature of The Democrat-Capital in which readers may express their views on topics of current interest. Clip and return ballot to The Democrat-Capital, 700 South Massachusetts, Sedalia, Mo., 65301.

Reaction to dumping a large part of the Hatch Act was 50-50 among readers of The Democrat-Capital who answered last Sunday's Sound Off question.

A total of 10 ballots came on the question: "The House has repealed most of the provisions of the Hatch Act, opening the door for increased political activity by federal employes. The bill now goes to the Senate. Do you favor this action?"

One reader who didn't wrote simply, "(We've) got too much political interference now." Another note said, "Dangerous! This must not happen."

Pamela Hammond, 200 East Seventh, wrote, "I am in favor of repealing the Hatch Act. For many years all federal employes have been discriminated against under the Hatch Act. I am against discrimination of people's rights in any form. It was Justice Black who stressed that the purpose of government is to encourage participation in the political process, not to curtail it.

"There have been no laws prohibiting federal employes from being business partners, bankers, religious leaders or becoming involved in charity work, so why keep them from being involved in political activities? The Constitutiton provides equal rights for everyone; let's not discriminate against federal employes," the letter concluded.

One unsigned letter said, "Most of us do not want a one-party system. That is what we might get if federal employes, in an effort to save their jobs, got into politics."

Robert D. Smith, president of the Sedalia local of the American Postal Workers Union, wrote: "I am very much in favor of the repeal of the Hatch Act.

"For more than 35 years federal and postal employes have been discriminated against by the Hatch Act. I do not believe that any citizen of our country should be relegated to a class that does not give them equal rights with the rest of the population. The Hatch Act as it stood did just that. You will find that the repeal of the Hatch Act will in no way weaken the provisions that prohibit political pressures on federal or postal employes. In fact, the safeguards will be strengthened to a great degree.

"As I see it, the repeal of the act will make it possible for a federal or postal employe to support a candidate of his or her choice or, if interested, run for a political office of their choice. No pressure will be applied by anyone to me or any other federal employe as to the candidate we would support or vote for. This is the American way of life," Smith reasoned.

Society brochure notes local historical sites

By RON JENNINGS
Staff Writer

Hoisting one of the heavy white historical markers from the rear of her station wagon last week, Mrs. Lillian Wells briefly forgot she was exhausted from spending the entire morning digging holes for sign posts.

"We're going to place this one at St. Helena," she said excitedly. "Have you ever been out there? If you haven't, drive out sometime!"

At this point, up until last week, Mrs. Wells would probably have stopped what she was doing, invited you inside to her antique-laden home at 1110 West Seventh, and proceeded to tell you the saga of St. Helena. Also known as Pin Hook, St. Helena, one would quickly have learned, was once a thriving settlement north of Sedalia that served as Pettis County's first seat of justice in the mid-1830's.

These days, when she's asked a question on local history, Mrs. Wells will still stop what she's doing, ask you in and even offer a glass of iced tea. But she'll also do something different — she'll hand you a new brochure summarizing the storied past of 16 historic sites in the city and 15 other points of interest in Pettis County.

These map-shaped pamphlets, 5,000 of them, will be presented to the public at 8 p.m. Monday in the county courthouse Assembly Room. The present owners of the historic sites will also be recognized.

Official recognition

A few of the places listed in the brochure, like Jack Oakie's birthplace at 522 West Seventh, and Col. David Thomson's Elm Spring dwelling north of Georgetown, have already been labeled as historic sites. Most of the buildings and land areas, however — such as St. Helena or the old Moerschel's Brewery building at Main and Missouri in Sedalia — have never officially been recognized.

To correct this oversight, Mrs. Wells, Eldon Leiter, Mrs. Betty Bruner, Mrs. Leslie Hale, Van Jones and W.A. McVey, all members of the Pettis County Historical Society, have spent the past year studying and selecting sites, designing the illustrated pamphlet and supervising sign-making operations. This past week, they placed the wooden signs in front of such places as the site of the old Missouri Pacific Railroad stockyards at Broadway and Marshall and at the Limestone Valley Farm near Smithton, where Col. L.M. Monsees and sons H.S., D.O. and Kalo made history with their magnificent Missouri mules in the early years of this century.

The guide itself is attractively designed and illustrated with Mrs. Bruner's sketches of everything from a chugging locomotive to a Lake Creek camp meeting scene. A capsule commentary on each site gives the observer an informative overview. For those interested in learning more, however, there are enough facts to get started on the right track for research.

But most important, Mrs. Wells said, "It's accurate... as accurate as we could possibly make it." For a woman who insisted that the final resting place of county pioneers be called "graveyards" in the guide ("that's what they were called back then") instead of cemeteries, this was a guiding light.

The names in the brochure read like a litany of local history — Smith's Hall at 105 West Main, built in 1868 by Gen. George Smith as a chautauqua center and entertainment palace; the Methodist Episcopal Church at 301 East Third (now the site of the Heynen Monument Co.), which is the oldest church building in Sedalia; the old fire station at 211 South Kentucky, built in 1887 for horse-drawn fire engines and hose wagons; Calvary Episcopal Church, Broadway and Ohio, built in 1886 and now the oldest local church building in continuous use.

County sites

Out in the county, one can now follow the directions in the brochure map to the Academy, a structure at Georgetown started around 1843 as a girl's seminary but finally completed in 1849 as the home of Gen. Smith, with one room reserved as a classroom for their daughters and friends.

There is also the Smithton Christian Church, built in 1859-60 and now the oldest church in continuous use in the county. Reading the new guide, one will discover this building was originally located 3 miles west in what was called Farmer's City and was not moved to its present site until 1873.

Another featured site is Reuben Gentry's Wood Dale farm, founded prior to 1820. On this stately estate is the oldest house (built in 1819) in continuous use in the county.

Although many of these sites are private property and not open to the general public, Mrs. Wells feels it "is so important that the people know where they are and also what they are, especially the lesser-known but interesting places."

With the joint financial help of the state American Revolution Bicentennial Commission and the city of Sedalia — along with the help of local volunteers like Mike McKenzie, who lettered the signs — Mrs. Wells' dream has come true.

There's just one thing left to do.

"We want to get these guides out to as many people who want them because they won't be any good if people can't read them and learn from them," she said. "We want school students and their parents, as many people as possible, to learn more about their city and county."

Other city sites

Other city sites listed in the brochure are:

Heard Memorial Club House — 200 West Broadway, former residence of Rep. and Mrs. John T. Heard, now home of Helen G. Steele and Sorosis Club.

Missouri Pacific Railroad repairs shops, located next to the old stockyards at Broadway and Marshall

Maple Leaf Club site, 100 block of East Main, present site of the Scot Joplin memorial marker. Joplin's most famous ragtime composition was named in honor of this club

J.A. Lamy Manufacturing Co., 108 West Pacific, organized in 1866. The present building was constructed in 1893.

The Katy Depot, 600 East Third, which was the stopping place for the famous "Katy Flyer" trains and is also an outstanding example of depot architecture.

Sedalia Public Library, Third and Kentucky, which was the first library in the state to be given an Andrew Carnegie grant.

Jennie Jaynes stadium, 200 South Limit, where a marker memorializes Jennie Jaynes Lewis, whose father, Col. A.D. Jaynes, was an early Sedalia businessman.

Missouri State Fairgrounds, 16th and Limit, which will hold its 75th Fair this August.

Katy Railroad repair shops, 20th Street west of Grand Avenue, which were built in 1900 and discontinued in 1956.

Katy stockyards, 24th and Clinton Road, which was built in 1904 as a resting stop to feed and water train loads of Texas cattle enroute to St. Louis and Chicago.

Additional county sites include: Georgetown marker, honoring the second county seat of Pettis County

Bothwell Lodge, built around the turn of the century by Sedalia financier John Bothwell

Henry Jones Farm, Route EE, which includes a house built in 1878. Traces of the historic Arrow Rock-Georgetown road are still visible at this farm.

Longwood, Route BB, which is considered one of the earliest settlements in Pettis County

Olive Branch Baptist Church, Route O, third oldest church in continuous use in the county.

Lake Creek Methodist Church and camp meeting site, south of Smithton, where camp meetings have been held continuously since 1845.

McVey School, East Broadway in Sedalia, which is a typical rural one-room school housing grades one through eight.

Brown's Springs Park, South Grand Avenue Road, which featured health springs and later a picnic grounds and amusement park.

Sedalia marker, West Highway 50, which contains a history of Sedalia.

Historic site marked

Today this spot north of Sedalia is a vacant field, filled with lush grass and interesting clues to the county's past. However, 140 years ago, it was the bustling seat of government for Pettis County. Van Jones, left, and his son, Pete, erected this sign last week to mark the spot. Other signs have been placed at other historic spots in the county and Sedalia in recent days.

Nuclear plant protest draws about 100 people

ST. CHARLES, Mo. (AP) — About 100 persons turned out Friday night to voice their opposition to Union Electric Co.'s proposed nuclear power plant in Callaway County.

The speakers, mostly St. Louis residents, testified at a hearing held by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The corps called the hearings prior to deciding whether to issue construction permits for the power plant.

State Sen. Harriet Woods, D-University City, asked Col. Richard L. Curl, the corps' Kansas City district engineer, if the corps or anyone else could guarantee that discharges into the Missouri River would not be dangerous.

She asked the corps not to act hastily in the matter, "because the consequences could be serious, indeed."

But Donald W. Capone, a Union Electric official, contended that safety measures adopted in construction of the $2.4 billion plant already have surpassed federal and state regulations.

The corps is responsible only for the part of the plant which will take in 40,000 gallons of river water a minute and discharge 10,000 gallons a minute.

Other speakers questioned scientists' knowledge of the long-term effects of radiation.

Dr. Vincent Palermo, a St. Louis County pathologist, said "the ingestion of radioactive material causes cancer — and increases in the ingestion cause increases in cancer.

"We are to become subjects of a human experiment. We don't know what will happen. And we don't have a voice in it."

The first unit of the plant is scheduled to go into operation in 1982. Union Electric officials said a delay in the issuance of a Corps of Engineers permit for use of the Missouri River would increase plant costs.

Average beef price hits 6-month high

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government figures show that retail beef and pork prices rose again last month, due mostly to higher prices paid farmers for live cattle and hogs.

The average national retail price of beef, measured on an all-cut basis, was more than $1.38 a pound in May, up 4.4 cents from the composite retail price in April. That was the highest beef price since last December when the average was nearly $1.39 a pound.

As used by USDA, the price covers choice-grade beef sold in grocery stores. That is from cattle which have been "finished" or fattened in feedlots on grain rations.

The report, issued Friday, said that the market price of choice live steers in May averaged $41.43 per 100 pounds over the entire month, compared with $39.73 in April.

Translated to the supermarket, the report said that farmers received an equivalent of 82.8 cents of each retail pound of beef in May, up from 78.6 cents in April. It takes about 2.3 pounds of live steer to make one pound of store beef.

The middleman's share for transporting, processing and selling beef was 55.6 cents a pound in May against 55.4 cents in April the report said.

Cattle prices, meanwhile, have dropped since their spring peaks and by mid-June were averaging around $38 or so per 100 pounds of the major major markets as the feedlot supply rose and packers became more selective, according to other USDA reports.

Retail pork prices rose to nearly $1.21 a pound in May from less than $1.19 in April. However, that was about what pork cost consumers last February and March.

Farmers received an equivalent of 73.8 cents a pound for pork sold in retail stores last month, compared with 64.5 cents in April. Middlemen's shares dropped to 47.1 cents from the April average of 54.4 cents a pound, the report said.

Live hog prices averaged $41.79 per 100 pounds in May, up from $36.97 in April. Through mid-June, hog prices have held fairly steady.

Room for improvement in Carter grain plan

By H. ROBERT DIERCKS

For years any proposal for a federal grain reserve has stood like a lightning rod to the farmer's ire. Each one advocated has gathered storm clouds of protest and sparked thunderous rumbling that has shaken the agricultural community to its very grass roots.

The Carter administration has prepared still another plan for a grain reserve. But this one, unlike its predecessors, holds out every promise of turning the lightning rod into a prod of cooperation. The reason lies in some important differences from past stocks policies.

In the 1950s and 1960s, when America swelled with surplus grain, the government bought the excess to help the farmer. In the process, the United States cushioned the blow of fickle weather for producers and consumers elsewhere in the world. But during occasional poor crop years, when smaller harvests gave farmers the chance to turn a better profit, the government either sold or gave away massive quantitites of the surpluses to keep prices in check.

What had been a by-product of farmers' growing capability became a means of stymieing opportunity for producers. This resulted in part because the band separating purchase prices and release prices was much too narrow. The government was permitted to sell the grain it bought from farmers when market prices reached only 15 per cent more than the government had paid. Markets were not allowed to perform their normal function of adjusting supply and demand.

Analysis

American farmers have resisted subsequent attempts to accumulate sizable reserves for fear the very same thing would happen. But more dependable weather has enabled the United States and other producing nations once more to amass comfortable surpluses. In fact, the anticipated carryover of 1.1 billion bushels of wheat in the United States this year will be the largest since the 1960s.

The Carter system establishes a specific amount of grain to be held in reserve — 300 million bushels or 9 million metric tons of wheat. Within limits it has placed these crops under producer rather than governmental control, thus removing the principal source of farmer irritation that had short-circuited previous proposals.

And it has cordoned off these stocks from the marketplace by setting purchase and release prices far enough apart to encourage use of the reserves when they are genuinely needed and not when it's politically expedient to dispose of them to control prices.

As refreshing as the new administration's plan is, there is room for improvement. It could be strengthened by making two adjustments. First, other types of grain should be added to the reserve. It is understandable that the administration began with wheat, since it is the primary feed grain and is now in relative abundance. But erratic weather and strong consumer demand can buffet prices and supplies of corn and soybeans as well. Our domestic livestock industry, U.S. consumers and traditional foreign customers would all be better served by a conscious U.S. grain reserve of, say 22 million tons, one-third wheat, one-half feed grains like corn and one-sixth soybeans.

This is a modest amount in comparison with the 100 million-ton glut the federal government owned in 1961. Yet it would be ample to see us through unanticipated shortages. The 250 million bushels of wheat alone are the equivalent of more than five loaves of breaf for every man, woman and child on the planet.

Second, the margin between purchase and release prices should be widened. The present plan calls for the government to advance participating farmers the going loan rate for reserve grain and assume the cost of its storage. Once the market value reaches 140 per cent of the loan rate, the government would discontinue storage payments, and farmers would be free to sell this grain. When prices go above 175 per cent of the loan rate, farmers would have to pay back the money lent by the government.

While this creates an incentive to withhold reserve grain until supplies are shortening, it doesn't go far enough. If each farmer were made to agree not to resell any of the reserve until the market prices were 200 per cent of the loan rate, there would be greater assurance that reserve stocks would be used only during genuine scarcity. Farmers and grain users would be encouraged to carry larger stocks on their own. And, producers would be encouraged to shift acreage to crops in short supply while grain users changed to items in greater supply.

These concepts rest on the time-tested idea that price is the true indicator of the relative abundance of food, domestically as well as internationally. As is the case now, when supplies are ample, price is low. When supplies become more scarce, price rises. When the price doubles, this is a message that the nation or the world really needs the grain held in reserve, and it should be released.

A 100 per cent spread between purchase and selling prices of reserves would permit grain markets to function under most circumstances, encouraging needed adjustments in production and consumption.

By allowing the market to work freely but within wide limits, this reserve system harnesses the pricing as an early warning signal. Farmers benefit by having reliable information on which to base their production decisions. Consumers benefit because early signals to increase production of short-supply items decreases rebuilding time and holds prices in check. And price shifts among different grains encourages ingredient substitution, making use of plentiful grains and dampening food price increases at the grocery store.

A conscious reserve system also helps protect our reputation on the world market as a reliable supplier of grains. Exports today represent about a third of our total harvested acreage, earning over $20 billion a year in foreign exchange. Increased foreign exchange means a stronger dollar. And that benefits us all. (NEA)

Higgins undergoes training

Terry Higgins, Houstonia, is taking part in an agricultural finance training program this summer, sponsored by the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis and the Federal Land Bank associations.

He was selected from among several applicants of the college of agriculture of the University of Missouri-Columbia, where he will be a senior this fall majoring in agricultural economics.

Higgins will learn to help farmers plan their loan needs, appraising farms and rural homes, and make credit recommendations to the Land Bank. He is training in several Land Bank associations in the state.

The program is in its third year of sponsorship by the Land Bank. Higgins plans to follow an agriculture finance career.

Two new courses in adult education

Two new study areas have been added to the State Fair Community College adult basic education program. The new courses are preparation for the Missouri written drivers test and introduction to metrics.

Shelley Pileggi, supervisor of the adult basic education program, said both new study areas are geared for use by students on an individual basis, using a workbook with corresponding cassette tape.

Few jobs, mobsters and low water tables

Despite bad PR, Arizona leads U.S. in growth

By MIKE McCLOY
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — No matter that water bills soar as water tables plunge ....

No matter that investors have been bilked of half a billion dollars in the last decade by crooked land developers ....

No matter that there are six times as many people seeking jobs as there are working ....

No matter. The Arizona boom goes booming along. This is the fastest growing state in the union. It has topped 2.2 million people, and the figure mounts like a pocket calculator with the multiplication button stuck.

From the lush green lawns of Phoenix to the red rock monuments of Sedona and Oak Creek, from the forested summer resort of Pine Top to the high chaparral of the Tucson desert, tourists and new residents are flocking in.

"Out in Arizona where the bad men are ..." began an old ragtime tune, but the gunslingers are gone now. Former reputed Mafia chieftains live on the ranches around Tucson, coming here as more common folk have, to share the Arizona lifestyle, to make money off the land and to generally enjoy a kind of comfortable pioneering.

A 23-part series by Investigative Reporters and Editors, Inc., on corruption in the state dealt mostly with associations of politicians and underworld characters. The investigation stemmed from the bombing death last June of reporter Don Bolles of the Arizona Republic.

Arizona has grown by 25 per cent since 1970, and "we're not expecting any tapering off" says Brent Brown, director of the state Office of Economic Planning and Development.

Certainly the bad publicity has had little or no effect on the Californians and Midwesterners who visit or keep second homes in Arizona.

The heart of the Arizona boom is not the tourist, but the would-be settler who comes to Arizona to live and work.

Frank Naylor, research manager of the state's Department of Economic Security, says his office still gets some 50 inquiries a week, mostly from people looking for work in construction and education.

But in Arizona's construction industry, job seekers outnumber workers 10 to 1, and the state's unemployment rate is a shade above the national average. Except in nursing, management and engineering, prospects are dim.

The state warns prospective Arizonans that they should come financially prepared to endure three to five months of unemployment.

They come, their hopes undimmed. Almost all say they want to enjoy the "lifestyle."

The state has an abiding problem with water.

In Tucson, where water is pumped from underground pools that have sunk 100 feet in the past 28 years, the average monthly residential water bill this summer will be $22.

Several city council members were recalled for raising the rates, but their successors quickly abandoned promises to roll back the rates when faced with the reality that $14 million will be needed to buy farmland and underground water rights through 1983.

An Arizona Supreme Court decision affirmed long-standing state policy that water rights remain with the land that the water flows over or under. The decision also reversed sentiment of many Tucsonans against the $1.6 billion Central Arizona Project, which will carry 2.8 million acre-feet of water to Phoenix and Tucson in the mid 1980s.

In April, the legislature passed a law allowing cities and mines to buy land, retire it from agriculture and "mine" underlying water for use elsewhere. Court challenges are expected, however.

Meanwhile, Prescott, in western Arizona, awaits the outcome of litigation by neighboring ranchers over water use, and Flagstaff, to the north, faces perennial problems with barely adequate reservoirs.

While some "no-growth" candidates capitalized on the water crisis in 1976 elections, no conclusion can be drawn, says Tom Clark, deputy director of the Arizona Water Commission.

"Tucson is using about five times as much water as is being replenished," Clark says. "If we cut out agriculture in the area entirely, they would still be using twice as much water as is being replaced."

There will have to be a lid on growth, "but you can't really tell where the lid comes down," he adds.

Combine the cost of an automobile, home, clothing, medical bills and food, a family of four can live cheaper in Dallas, Los Angeles, San Diego, Cincinnati, Kansas City, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Houston or Atlanta than here. But it costs more to live in Honolulu, Boston, New York, Milwaukee, San Francisco, Buffalo, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Minneapolis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Seattle and Baltimore, according to First National Bank of Arizona.

The Arizona real estate market slowed along with the national economy two years ago, but it started recovering in the last half of last year, and now it is at its highest level in history.

One of the best known developers in the state is Del E. Webb Corp. With a population of 40,000, Webb's 17-year-old Sun City retirement community was host to 300,000 visitors last year.

Eight hundred housing units were sold in Sun City in February, says Webb President John W. Meeker, compared with 882 in all of 1976. Production was raised to 50 units a day, and sales totaled 742 in March and 545 in April.

"With thousands of people retiring early on substantial pensions and other income sources, we see a continuing positive trend," he added, announcing plans to expand Sun City's population to 64,000 by building on an additional 12,000 acres of former desert.

But all is not bright. McCulloch Oil Corp. announced in November that it would finish developing Lake Havasu City, with its transplanted London Bridge on the Colorado River, and the Fountain Hills community near Phoenix. But after that, it will go out of the land development business.

Lake Havasu City shares the same desert that has seen dozens of subdivision developments spring up and die in the past decade. Most notable was Cochise College Park, which bilked 10,000 investors of $40 million before it collapsed in 1972.

Six persons connected with Cochise College Park were convicted of fraud on May 23, and 11 more are awaiting trial. Ned Warren, self-proclaimed "godfather" of Arizona land schemes, who was mentioned in company correspondence as a director of the firm, was not indicted in this case. However, on May 27, from a hospital bed where he had been confined since February with a heart ailment, he pleaded guilty to state land fraud and bribery charges which had been filed in Maricopa County Superior Court in Phoenix. He also withdrew his appeal of a 1975 federal extortion conviction. He is under guard at his Phoenix home awaiting sentencing in state court.

The collapse of Cochise College Park and several other fraud-ridden Arizona developments, along with convictions of several land crooks and stiffer laws, have brought a virtual standstill to remote subdivision developments, state officials say.

Clark says a new law requiring developers to disclose the availability of water also has helped.

Attorney General Bruce Babbitt and former U.S. Attorney William Smitherman, who now heads a joint legislative task force on organized crime, say the state is gaining control.

Arizona's first statewide grand jury indicted 40 persons last year and the state has not lost a case, Babbitt noted.

Among notables named in true bills was Robert H. Fendler, founder of U.S. and Lincoln Thrift Associations in Phoenix and Tucson. Some 20,000 investors deposited $52 million before the firms were shut down by the U.S. Securites and Exchange Commission and federal court in 1975. Investors may get back 10 cents on the dollar when assets are distributed by court-appointed trustees, officials say.

Fendler is accused of stealing $1.5 million from the thrift firms to finance American Bank of Commerce in Phoenix.

Smitherman, who will use a $600,000 appropriation in an attempt to close loopholes in state regulations, concedes that "more fraud and conspiracy cases have been filed in this district than any district in the nation."

Armed with subpoena power, the task force will examine narcotics and pornography. "I'm going to see where the Mafia kinds of criminals are, what they're doing," says Smitherman.

"And I'm sure we're going to find deficiencies in the state's ability to regulate insurance, banking and real estate. Then there are things like the racing industry."

Businessmen have complained that over-regulation stifles them. But Smitherman says, "What possible advantage could these ripoffs be to Arizona? We don't need an army of crooks in business to grow."

However, pinpointing what is needed for orderly growth remains a problem. Much of the responsibility for balancing government services, water, land use and population falls on Brent Brown, the state planner.

"There's enough water in Arizona to handle a lot of growth," he says. "But it means you'll have to do away with a lot of agriculture or copper."

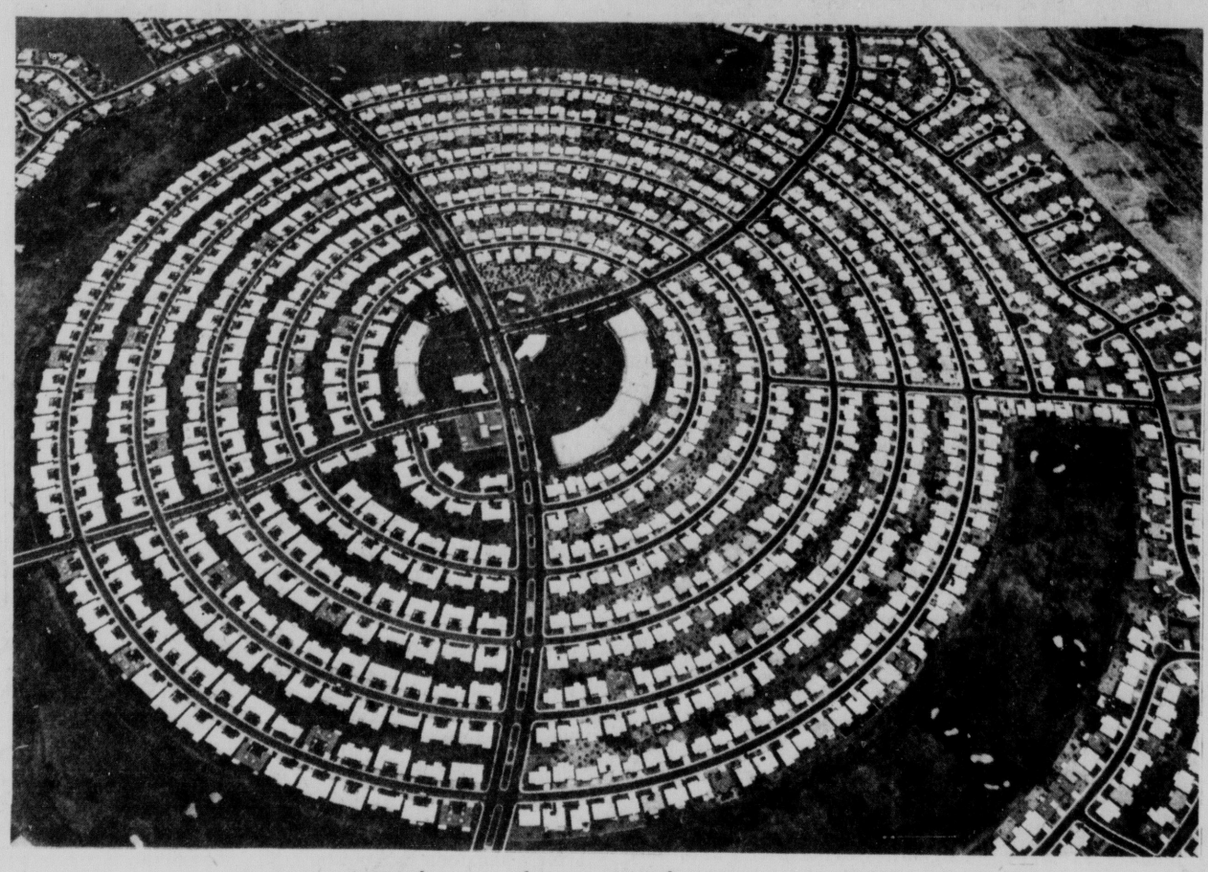
Arizona produced about 64 per cent of the nation's domestic copper last year, Brown says, adding, "I don't know if you want to put a lot more people in Sun City and do away with the copper.

Being paid $100,000 to help achieve such balance is the Hudson Institute of New York. Headed by Herman Kahn, the institute has been retained by banking and business leaders to project the Arizona of 2012, after a century of statehood, and offer alternatives.

Kahn already has predicted that Arizona will be an example of America's first "postindustrial society," populated by "a lot of wealthy people who haven't worked recently," living amid "a very large amount of urban sprawl."

Holding onto conservative and traditional values, "they will be relatively square," Kahn said.

Whether Arizona is square doesn't matter says Brown. "People are going to come here no matter what."



Where the people are

Symbolic of Arizona's attraction and growth, houses in the big Sun City development outside Phoenix are ringed by a golf course as they cluster about a shopping center nucleus. The 17-year-old development has a population of 40,000 and, if the trend to Arizona continues, may grow to 64,000 on yet-to-be-developed desert acres.

Nobody here but us forecasters

The novelist Alexander Solzhenitzyn, speaking in this country shortly after his expulsion from Russia, called it "almost incomprehensible to the human mind" that U.S. business firms put profit above all else in dealing with the Soviet Union.

What had appalled Solzhenitzyn was a display of sophisticated American police equipment at a trade fair in Moscow. Did not the American businessmen, he asked, realize that in Russia such paraphernalia is not used against criminals, but to keep the citizenry in check?

One is compelled to ask the same sort of questions about the Cyber 76 computer, which the Control Data Corp. had tried to sell to Russia for $13 million. President Carter squelshed the deal at the last minute after some pointed questions started being asked.

As Jack Anderson and others have reported, the Cyber 76 is at least 15 years ahead of anything the Russians have. This is the computer that is used as the brain center for the National Security Council, the Air Force and the Pentagon.

The Russians had claimed they wanted the Cyber 76 only for weather research and forecasting. If you believe that, you must also believe in the Easter Bunny and the Tooth Fairy. The facts, as they have been slowly extracted from various sources, seem to be that the computer could have been converted to such uses as anti-submarine warfare, missile tracking, nuclear weapons technology and code-breaking, to mention a few.

The Commerce Department, its tunnel vision trained only on the dollar signs, was on the verge of giving Control Data the needed export license before the deal was scuttled. That things got this far makes us seriously wonder who's minding the national security shop back in Washington.

Of course, Control Data is not alone in clamoring for rubles, and numerous other computers, less-sophisticated than the Cyber 76 but still very useful to Russia, have been sold to the Kremlin. Firms such as General Motors, Dow Chemical, DuPont, Union Carbide, Firestone and others are also doing their part to bolster the soviet economy.

The apostles of detente will assure us that all of this is in our best interests.

Like when we traded with Japan in the 30s.

Black colleagues of Ashbrook mad

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Rep. John Ashbrook, R -Ohio, has an unruly tongue, which has now gotten him into a backstage brouhaha with his black colleagues.

We started the imbroglio by reporting that Ashbrook, in a nasty reference to the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., had growled that time and money "should not be wasted investigating the murder of some nigger."

The remark allegedly was made in front of congressmen who got together over chicken dinner to discuss the House assassination investigation. Witnesses clearly recall hearing Ashbrook make the controversial statement. One witness, Richard Sprague, former chief counsel of the House Assassinations Committee, confirmed the incident from his records. But Ashbrook denied he had said anything of the sort.

The congressman from Johnstown, Ohio, is an amiable fellow who, nevertheless, has a reputation for shooting from the hip. He has also voted down the line against the civil rights measures that the venerated Dr. King died for. On May 13, therefore, we reported what the witnesses had overheard.

The Congressional Black Caucus immediately fired off a private letter to House Republican Leader John Rhodes asking him to investigate the alleged racial slur. "We submit this request to you," wrote Rep. Parren Mitchell, D - Md., the caucus chairman, "hoping it will prevent the Republican members of the House from being tarred with the brush of racism."

Rhodes responded two weeks later. "I have talked personally," he reported, "with Rep. John Ashbrook ... (who) categorically denies having said those words, or any words similar to them." Rhodes said he had also talked with other congressmen who attended the dinner. None of them, he wrote, had "any recollection of having heard Ashbrook utter those words."

This doesn't square with our own investigation of the incident. It should also be noted that the unwritten rules of the House forbid one member from disparaging another in public. The black caucus chairman, therefore, was not satisfied with Rhodes' response.

With the concurrence of the caucus, Mitchell fired off a second letter demanding a public disavowal from Ashbrook. The black leader called for Ashbrook to "seize the earliest opportunity to set forth his views on race relations, his attitudes towards minorities and his public and private relations with blacks...in an appropriate public forum."

Ashbrook told us he would ignore Mitchell's challenge. "Arrogance of that type doesn't need to be answered," he snorted. Then, in another exhibition of hip shooting, he suggested that Mitchell should come forward and reveal his own record.

"Many people would like to know," shot Ashbrook, "whether Mitchell is in favor of perversions of civil rights." By perversions, Ashbrook said he meant "reverse discrimination and affirmative action (which causes) the lowering of standards under the guise of civil rights."

Then Ashbrook, apparently changing his mind about ignoring Mitchell, offered to debate him.

EXPORTING OIL — President Carter is seriously considering a plan to export valuable Alaskan oil to Japan. This would increase American reliance on imported Arab oil by up to 600,000 barrels a day.

In a private White House meeting, Carter told Rep. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., that his energy program depends on convincing the public that a crisis exists. Exporting Alaskan oil, the president admitted, would dispel that impression. "It would take a preparatory selling job to explain it to the public," Carter is quoted as saying.

The House voted a ban on exporting Alaskan oil, but the provision was knocked out by the Senate. "I don't want Congress to tie my hands," Carter told Dodd. The congressman was impressed with Carter's technical knowledge on the issue.

The oil companies claim it would be too expensive to transport Alaskan oil from the West Coast, where there is a surplus. They want to "swap" the Alaskan crude with Japan for an equivalent amount of Saudi Arabian oil. This would save millions for the oil tycoons. But the United States, of course, could not rely on Arab imports in time of crisis.

Parking war is hot one

WASHINGTON — Futurists are now predicting that the world will end with neither a whimper nor a bang. It will end when enough people can't find a parking place. In Washington they are voting stern parking measures for their streets, which could change the American way of life as we know it.

Buchwald

In the past, commuters from the suburbs as well as Maryland and Virginia have driven into the city and have parked their cars all day long in front of someone's house, and then at the end of the day driven them back to the suburbs where they pay their taxes, and, according to all the real estate ads, live the good life.

But a court ruling has changed all this and now motorized incursions from the hinterlands will be prohibited. It could turn Washington into another Beirut.

When you take a person's parking spot away from him, you take away the dearest thing in his life. We are not really talking about parking — but the territorial imperative. Man has always been willing to go to war over real estate, and there is no land as precious to an American as a place where he can leave his car.

To quote Winston Churchill, "The storm clouds are gathering." In suburban shopping center malls militant parking leaders are inciting suburbanites to prepare for battle. City-dwellers are calling for armored tow trucks to repell an invasion. Hardliners from both sides are rallying the mobs.

A spokesman for the city-dwellers said, "We've had it up to here with the suburbanites' cars. They come in the winter and make potholes which we city-dwellers have to pay to repair. They come in the summertime and pollute our air. They make obscene remarks to our women, and think they can buy anything with their money. Well, now the courts have decided they can't park all day, wherever they want to. If they want to live in the suburbs let them stay there."

A leader of the out-of-town Free Parking Movement clenched his fist.

"The Declaration of Independence provides for the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," he said.

"But it doesn't say anything about parking," I told him.

"What do you think the 'pursuit of happiness' translates into?" he said bitterly. "There is no greater pursuit of it than trying to find a place to put your car. Americans spend more time looking for an empty parking space than they do watching television. Ninety per cent of all their leisure time is wasted searching for a parking spot. We will not be told where we can and cannot park. If they lay a finger on the bumper of just one of our loved ones, it will mean civil war."

The voices of moderation are trying to find a peaceful solution to the problem. One that has been offered is that the West Bank of the Potomac be given to the suburbanites for all-day parking. They would have free access to Washington, providing they come over on foot. The Bethesda Heights would be offered for alternate day parking, and the Dulles Airport strip would be declared a neutral zone for tourists.

But both the city-dwellers and the suburbanites are reluctant to accept the agreement.

The militant suburbanites, backed by their militant politicians, have declared that "Parking is not negotiable. Those parking spaces have been ours for 50 years and we will not give them up."

The equally militant city people are prepared to fight back. As one of their leaders said, "The first gas-guzzling commuter car that parks illegally on one of our streets will find a parking meter shoved its tailpipe where it belongs."

Bo Callaway hatchet job is analyzed

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — In the current issue of Harpers magazine, contributing editor Jim Hougan has done something almost unknown in the annals of Washington journalism: He has committed a kindness. In the matter of Howard "Bo" Callaway, Hougan has undertaken to right a wrong. Here on the banks of the Potomac, it very seldom happens.

Kilpatrick

Callaway, if you recall, is the wealthy and affable Georgian, the scion of a public-spirited family, who got into politics as a member of the House in 1964. In 1966 he was robbed of the governorship of Georgia. In May of 1973 he returned to public life as secretary of the Army. He resigned that post in July of 1975 in order to become manager of Gerald Ford's presidential campaign.

And in March, 1976, the victim of a truly vicious smear campaign, Callaway resigned from the Ford organization. Shortly thereafter, he dropped out of sight. His reputation had been effectively destroyed, his political career put to an end.

A few members of the Washington press corps, knowing Bo Callaway as a man of integrity, defended him from the beginning of the ordeal he experienced. In the hurly-burly of the presidential primaries, our voices went unheard. By early summer of last year, Callaway had become, politically speaking, a non-person; and non-persons make no news. He had been terribly wronged — but, well, these things happen. After a time, old character assassinations get to be old news.

Harpers magazine ordinarily is regarded as a mildly liberal outfit, identified with causes that McGovern Democrats hold dear. It is an act of singular grace on the editors' part to resurrect a conservative Republican through Hougan's benedictory piece. Like Portia's little candle one is minded to remark, so shines a good deed in a naughty world.

The charge brought against Callaway — if so flimsy a concoction of innuendoes may be dignified by calling it a charge— was that he had used his position as secretary of the Army for private gain. The gist of it was that Callaway had put pressure on a couple of cronies in the Department of Agriculture to get special favors for his family-owned ski resort at Crested Butte, Colo.

If Callaway actually had done any such thing, it would have been a palpable violation of criminal law. As Hougan's long and definitive article makes clear, Callaway was wholly innocent. Only in the poisoned atmosphere of post-Watergate Washington could he be accused of even an appearance of impropriety. The worst that could be shown was that as secretary of the Army, he had devoted a small fraction of his time to personal business interests— a practice universally accepted at the highest levels of both the executive and legislative branches.

Callaway was destroyed, in the event, by a nasty little lynch mob of Democratic senators, led by Floyd Haskell of Colorado. They timed their ambush for March of 1976. The exposure of Callaway's perfidy, right at the beginning of the ski season, would have a "devastating effect." Coincidentally, the exposure would come in the midst of the presidential primaries. Then it would have "national impact."

Thus Haskell summoned his subcommittee on the environment and land resources for the kangaroo trial of Bo Callaway. The proceedings were pure travesty. Not one witness could be found to sustain a single substantive allegation. Under oath, 13 persons were asked if Callaway had pressured them in any way on Crested Butte. One by one, they gave their sworn answers: "No, absolutely not, none whatsoever..." So the Democratic majority of the committee of course convicted Callaway anyhow. Not of actual wrongdoing, mind you, but of conduct "at least translatable into the appearance of improper pressure." That is like having creosote on your hands.

Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson of Washington, chairman of the parent committee, could have stopped Haskell's irresponsible performance by lifting his hand. Jackson would not lift it. Sen. Frank Church of Idaho could have prevented the destruction of Callaway's reputation by refusing to give Haskell his proxy; Church gave Haskell his proxy. The subcommittee vote was 5-4 to issue the final sleazy report.

Hougan tells a small, revealing story. Some months later, Callaway happened to be in the city room of the Washington Post. He told his tale to Ben Bradlee, executive editor. Bradlee sighed. "C'est vrai," he said, "mais ce n'est pas une histoire." True, but no story. By that time, Bradlee was right; I cannot fault his news judgment. But Hougan and Harpers merit special thanks for reviving the story anyhow. Better their vindication than none at all.

There's still a song in Richard Rodgers' heart

EDITOR'S NOTE — For the past six decades, with time out for a brief intermission in Hollywood, the name of Richard Rodgers has hung on a Broadway marquee. It's there now for the SRO revival of "The King and I." America's master of melody will be 75 this week. Rare bad notices still depress him.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Oh, what a beautiful morning, a grand night for singing and hallelujah, I'm a bum if I forget to send a dozen full blown roses.

Richard Rodgers will be 75 on Tuesday, and who knows where or when anyone in a blue moon will ever again write so many easy to remember melodies?

The sound of music cascading from this wonderful guy has bewitched, bothered and bewildered three generations of theater-goers, from "Poor Little Ritz Girl" in 1920, when he was just getting out of high school, to the latest revival of "The King and I" now setting Broadway box office records.

There's a small hotel where in the cool of the evening I could write a book about my favorite things in Rodgers' magic music, but how was I to know dozens already have been written, telling how the sweetest sounds began echoing from a certain doctor's apartment in Manhattan when Richard, then only 16, going on 17, was publishing his first songs?

The gentleman is a dope or at best a Johnny one-note who doesn't realize by now that the above lines contain the titles of more than 20 songs by Richard Rodgers, leaving another 800 for birthday salutes from the rest of the world.

The composer was sitting in his Madison Avenue office the other day, surrounded by posters from "Oklahoma!," "Carousel," South Pacific," "Pal Joey" and 35 other Broadway openings, when a Person Friday came in to announce Yul Brynner had received another standing ovation in "The King and I" revival last night, and the past week's "over the window take" of $25,000 had set a record but this week would be even better.

"How wonderful. They all deserve it," said Richard Rodgers with the becoming modesty that has made him one of the few nice guys ever to finish first in this town.

Only he really didn't say it. The lips moved, the jaw strained and the words squawked up in pitiful echoing rumbles from the electronic device that serves as Richard Rodgers' larynx since his cancer operation several years ago. This Mount Rushmore of melody whose tunes are on the air somewhere in the world every minute of the day, whose scores are echoed in endless reprise in countless theaters, music barns and high school auditoriums everywhere on earth is all but speechless now.

The best that modern medicine can provide for the preservation of our rarest songbird is a wheezing voice box with less fidelity than the old windup Victrolas that first shared his genius with the world outside his father's consulting room.

But there's still a song in Richard Rodgers' heart and a smile on his pixie face that rejects pity and knows only optimism, especially when the conversation, no matter how labored, turns to the state of the theater.

"They were saying Broadway was dead when I wrote my first score with Larry Hart more than 50 years ago, and they've been saying it ever since. Broadway is more alive than ever," he rejoiced painfully. "And I don't just mean the revival of 'The King and I.' Look at 'Annie' and 'A Chorus Line' and 'Sly Fox.' Modern music has its appeal, but the more traditional sound has a better chance: people still like to hum what they hear."

Rodgers wrote 28 stage musicals and eight films with lyricist Lorenz Hart; witty, brittle, sophisticated, almost naughty comedies that extended the boundaries of musical comedy beyond the sugar candy mountains of Sigmund Romberg and Rudolph Friml.

When Hart died in the early 1940s, Rodgers began a partnership with Oscar Hammerstein 2nd that resulted in nine Broadway shows, from "Oklahoma!" to "The Sound of Music," one film, "State Fair," and a television musical "Cinderella," many of them heart warming, lush, often daring folk operas, rich in melody and theatrical innovation.

After Hammerstein's death in 1960, Rodgers served as his own lyricist for "No Strings" and then teamed with young Stephen Sondheim for "Do I Hear A Waltz?"

In the last six decades the only time Richard Rodgers' name has not been on a Broadway marquee. was the brief period from 1931 to 1933 when he and Hart went to Hollywood for a spate of film musicals. Over the years stars like Al Jolson, Bing Crosby, George M. Cohan, Jimmy Durante, W.C. Fields, Mary Martin, Gene Kelly, Ezio Pinza and whole courtyards of footprints from Graumman's Chinese have tapped out tunes by Richard Rodgers on opening night.

And critics like Robert Benchley, Alexander Woollcott, Dorothy Parker, George Gene Nathan, Gene Fowler, Brooks Atkinson, Walter Winchell and Clive Barnes have been on the aisle to render a verdict, while the anxious composer paced the lobby.

"I have to admit, I always wait up for the reviews," Rodgers said with the shy grin of an honest man owning up to his faults.

Robert Benchley, a Rodgers fan, didn't particularly like "Jumbo," the gargantuan circus musical with Jimmy Durante. "It is enough of a circus deluxe for those who like them," he wrote in the New Yorker. "Me, I shut my eyes and always have. At a regular circus I sometimes shut my eyes and forget to open them, but you can't do that at Jumbo, or you will miss something that regular circuses don't have. Beautiful girls, for one thing."

Dorothy Parker thought Rodgers' score for "America's Sweetheart" was "truly charming," but noted with the warmth of rattlesnake milk that "Mr. Hart has donated lyrics the rhymes of which are less internal than colonic."

Rodgers sighed at the memory of these shafts. "Bad notices," he conceded, "always induce a momentary depression. Six months later I sometimes read them again and realize the critic was right or almost right."

Amid all the rave reviews, the mountains of acclaim rising over the molehills of doubt, there is one word that grates on the composer's sensitive ear like a busted string in the cello section. "I don't like it when they call my music spiritual, whatever they mean by that," he said, turning the word over in his mind like a discordant melody. "It was never my intention to be spiritual in anything I wrote."

Even in such hymn-like bursts of rhapsody as the swelling notes he wrote for such lines as "walk on, walk on with hope in your heart and you'll never walk alone"?

"Well," conceded Richard Rodgers from the tortured depths of his voice box, "maybe optimistic." The piano in the corner, open and ready, reprised the refrain.

Witch makes switch from convent

BURTON, Ohio (AP) — Bonnie Huffman has forsaken her nun's wimple for a witch's pentagram.

She was known as Sister Geralyn during her 11 years with the Order of St. Francis; but she now is a full-fledged Dianic witch.

The metamorphosis, she said, began when she grew tired of power struggles within the convent and within the church. She went from convent to coven when she discovered that her brand of witchcraft is a religion which practices "a sophisticated brand of social justice for its citizens."

When discussing witchcraft, her first warning is not to confuse it with devil worship and black magic. "We don't believe in a devil," she said.

Ms. Huffman explained that the Dianic order has a feminist tradition and focuses its worship on the creative force in the universe identified as the Goddess by its followers. It is also referred to as the Old Religion.

When Ms. Huffman left the convent, she received her doctorate in American studies at Case Western Reserve University. She lives in Burton and has been teaching in the honors and experimental college at Kent State University since 1971.

"I always wanted to teach, and nuns were always romanticized at home and at school. I figured the best way to teach was to be a nun." She attended parochial schools in Columbus and Toledo and then entered the Mother House of the Order of St. Francis in Joliet, Ill., whera she soon became restive and rebellious.

"When I left the convent, I continued to attend church for awhile but became more and more disillusioned with what I regarded as a continuance of a philosophy of social justice, but the practice of discrimination in many areas."

She says she's content with her new religion. "There's lots of room for creativity in witchcraft. Some witches are herbalists, others are good at divination. It depends on the individual. At the center of it all, however, is worship of the Goddess. Powers we learn to tap are byproducts of being witches."

She said she's writing a book about her experiences as a nun and as a witch. One of the themes, she said, is to get witchcraft "out of the broomcloset and into the mainstream."

PAINTING and WALLCOVERING TIPS

By Jane Dugan

OFF WITH THE OLD

Ideally, old wallpaper should be removed before new paper is hung, to assure the best possible finish.

The best way to remove the old wallpaper is with a steamer. You can rent one from Dugan's. Hand scraping without steaming can be a tedious, time-consuming chore.

When using a steamer, start at the bottom in a corner of the wall or section that is papered. Hold the steam plate in place until the paper starts to loosen. As you work, the rising steam will loosen the paper above your working area, so the job will get easier as you go along. A wide scraper is a handy tool to speed the process.

Once paper is removed, the wall should be cleaned of any old paste or other residue, then prepared like any other wall for new paper. Sound simple? It is — with the right methods and tools. Stop in and see us for what you need to do a better job — and to create exciting new walls for your home.

Quietly

Quietly she gave of herself
To others day by day,
Quietly she spread kindness
As she went along her way,
About her was no glamour
But young lives did she inspire
As a teacher until at last came
The time she must retire,
But she went on being helpful
To those who needed aid,
Day after day to a nursing home
Trips by her were made,
It wasn't for her relatives
It was simply those she knew
Needed a bit of cheering
And, for them, that's what she'd do,
She cooked and took them food,
Their favorite foods and so
Not now and then but every day
To see them she would go.
She didn't want to do things
In a simple way for she
Would plan something special
Then do it quietly.
I knew of many things she did,
Kindnesses great and small
But I was just an acquaintance
So I did not know them all,
As I heard of things she did
It often crossed my mind
If some day she was in their plight
Would someone be as kind,
Would they think of her and do for her
As for others she has done,
Would friends recall her thoughtfulness
Or for her would there be none,
I hoped that she would never know
A nursing home's long hours
Because people soon forget
The cards, the food, the flowers,
I hoped she would go quickly,
I guess God felt that way, too,
He just reached down and took her home
For her good life here was through.
Some almost shout the things they do
But from her you never heard
Of all the kindness that she gave Quietly — without a word.

Caterer says trend informal

NEW YORK (AP) — "Catering is the new show business," says Ian Maksik, a caterer's consultant who has planned over 13,000 parties and coordinated 4,119 weddings to date.

Maksik's eyes light up as he discusses his favorite topic, the catered affair. He especially warms to the subject of weddings.

"The trend in weddings is away from the formal banquet," says Maksik, who has recently taken on a new assignment as the first catering editor of Cue magazine. "In fact, the 'Goodbye, Columbus' wedding — too much food served with too much pizzazz — is on the way out."

What's on the way in, he says, is the "football" feast — beer and sandwiches.

"It derives its name from the days when the waiter would stand at the end of the table, toss a salami on rye to the groom, and the band played on," Maksik explains. "This kind of wedding can be done with taste, has a nostalgic charm and suits the economy. Anyway, the ceremony is now more important to brides and grooms than the wedding reception."

Maksik applauds the idea of holding the wedding in an unusual place, from the restaurant where a couple had their first date to a golf course, if they're big on the game.

"A good caterer will follow you anywhere," he notes.

Maksik's moustache twitches in anticipation when he hears the words wedding, anniversary, graduation — anything that's the occasion for a party — and the creative wheels start turning.

"I once hired an elephant for a Bar Mitzvah boy to make his reception entrance on," he says. "The boy's parents had always wanted to take an African safari."

Another memorable occasion he recalled with a slight shudder was a "catered divorce." The ex-bride and groom wore black and cut a seven-tiered black cake inscribed "Free at Last." The cake symbolized the seven years the couple had been married.

'It was a simple divorce brunch featuring crepes and omelettes," the columnist says. "There was no dispute over the bill. Since the bride had paid for the wedding, the ex-groom paid for the divorce gala."

The son of Ben Maksik, he cut his catering teeth in his father's Brooklyn nightclub, the Town and Country, watching stars like Tony Bennett, Steve Lawrence and Sammy Davis Jr. perform.

He was graduated from Cornell University's Hotel School, where he was elected to "Ye Host," the school's Phi Beta Kappa. His first job was as manager of the Statler Hilton Hotel at Kennedy Airport; he then launched his own business, where he continues to wear his chef's hat as a consultant, in addition to his green eyeshade as Cue's catering editor.

FOOD MAY BE CULPRIT IN KIDS' BEHAVIOR

NEW YORK (AP) — "Food can very definitely affect your child's personality," says Dr. Alan C. Levin, Medical Director of the New York Institute for Child Development.

"Allergies, food sensitivities and the inability to properly metabolize carbohydrates could lead to certain behavior in their children which may cause parents worry and concern," adds the pediatrician, who has been in private practice for nearly 40 years.

He suggests trying to pinpoint the offending foods by keeping a diet record and watching for any changes in behavior in connection with certain foods.

Golden anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Carson Stratton, Lincoln, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary with an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. July 3 at the Zion Lutheran Church, Lincoln. The celebration will be hosted by the couple's son, Tilman Stratton, Indianola, Iowa; and daughter, Betty Lapointe, St. Louis. The Strattons have eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Friends and relatives are invited to attend. The couple requests no gifts please.

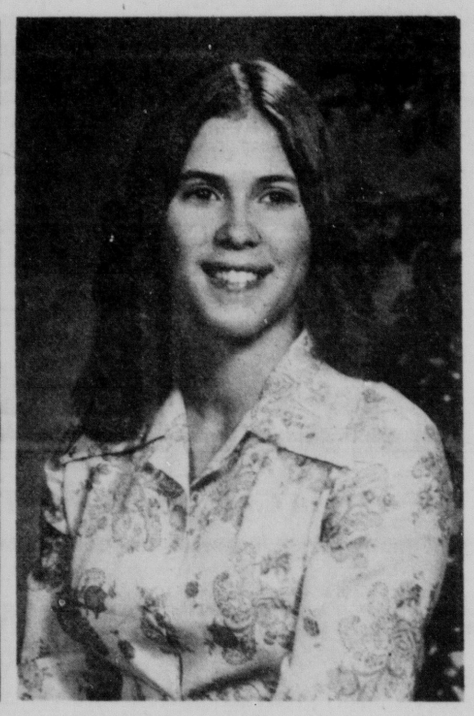
Miss Gerke is employed as a senior payment control specialist at State Farm Insurance Co., Columbia. Her fiance is employed as a welder at Westinghouse, Jefferson City.

A Sept. 10 wedding at St. John's Catholic Church, Clear Creek, is planned.



Miss Gerri Diane Martin

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Martin, 2901 Monsees Dr., announce the engagement of their daughter, Gerri Diane, to James Leroy Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Barnes, Route 2.

Woman airline pilot just 'one of the guys'

NEW YORK (AP) — Someday she'd like to be a captain on an SST, but right now Claudia Jones likes being second officer on a Boeing 727.

One of Continental Airlines' three female pilots, she was the only woman among the 17 men in her training class.

"They treated me like one of the guys, which is what I wanted," she said in an interview here. "To date I have not found anyone who's not been really super."

At age 32 Mrs. Jones has 5,300 hours in the air and has commercial pilot and flight instructor ratings for helicopters, seaplanes, single engine and multiengine planes. She is one of 254 women helicopter pilots in the free world and is president of Whirly-Girls, the international women helicopter pilots association.

She was born on Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala., where her father was stationed in the Air Force, and took her first plane ride at age 2 in a Piper Cub — "from a cowpasture back to the same cowpasture in Georgia" — but she never thought of a career in aviation.

A music major at the University of Florida, she planned to become a music teacher. That plan changed when the accomplished musician, who plays 19 instruments and is also a vocalist, formed a nightclub act with a friend in 1967. With three backup musicians, they started touring.

"We performed around the country and had so many problems with transportation somebody decided that one of us was going to have to learn to fly and because I was the biggest daredevil they pointed a finger at me," she explains.

Members of the act chipped in to pay for her flying lessons and the group leased a seven-passenger aircraft, removing the back seats to make space for their instruments.

"It got so I couldn't wait till I got offstage so I could go and plot the course for the next day. Flying got to be more fun than entertaining," said the 5 foot 7, brown-eyed pilot, who was wearing a green and white dress and white sandals.

In 1970 she went into aviation full time, teaching and flying charter.

She met her husband, Hal, a helicopter and fixed wing aircraft pilot, at Las Vegas airport when he asked her to teach one of his five children from a previous marriage to fly. She has since taught all of the children, ranging in age now from 13 to 22.

"Hal had a helicopter and I had a plane, so we decided to form a business and I got elected president," she said.

A couple of years later they extended the partnership to marriage, and now all five children are active in Oasis Aviation: The oldest daughter is a flight instructor; two sons work in the shop; another daughter helps in the office, and the youngest boy washes airplanes and does odd jobs.

Mrs. Jones, who is still involved in the business, "didn't go knocking on airlines' doors because they just weren't hiring women. But when I heard they were giving women equal opportunity I applied right away.

"Anybody who gets hooked on flying isn't satisfied with flying small airplanes, but wants larger and more complex equipment," explains Mrs. Jones. "But it's the hardest work I've ever done in my life. The training is unbelievable."

Her uniform is identical to the male officers', except that the doublebreasted coat is fitted and has four buttons instead of six, and she wears a softer shirt with no pockets. Her long blonde hair, pulled back at the neck, flows from under the regulation hat.

"We're not allowed to wear petroleum-based makeup because it ignites with oxygen and if I ever had to use pure oxygen I'd sustain burns," she explains. "I'm not sure which makeup has a grease base so I just do without."

Mrs. Jones, who says passengers often exclaim with disbelief "a girl!" as she stands near the door after a flight, sees no reason why more women shouldn't become pilots.

"People have preconceived notions, and it will take a little time to change all that," she says. "I've taught men to fly and I've taught women to fly, and I honestly cannot see any difference in ability."

Mrs. Jones has apartments in Los Angeles, where she is based, and in Las Vegas, and a house 20 miles northwest of Las Vegas in the Toyabee National Forest, where she lives at an appropriately high altitude of 8,500 feet.

She and her husband enjoy taking their motor home, their motor bikes or their helicopter out into the desert, where they explore ghost towns.

U.S. bows to authority

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The United States fought a war to get rid of the British, but they still make a fuss over royalty and titles. The Princess Royal Anne, only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, came here to unveil the flattering bronze statue of her namesake, Queen Anne, in front of the courthouse in Centreville, on Maryland's famous Eastern Shore. The affair was for the public on a first-come, first-serve basis, and many out-of-towners who had been clamoring for tickets couldn't make it. The exclusive Eastern Shore in Queen Anne County, a kind of royal area in itself, was the proper place for the princess to honor her ancestor.

It was obvious on the young princess's second visit to this country that marriage and pregnancy have mellowed her. She came with her brother, Prince Charles, several years ago when she was 19 and didn't make much of a hit. She was snobbish, sullen and rude, and resented that her brother, who was charming and friendly, stole the show. This year, accompanied by her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, she did all the proper things with a gracious smile. The two met President Carter and the First Lady. They had lunch with Chip and Caron Carter in the family dining room.

She receive the keys of the city of Washington from Mayor Washington and gave him a photograph of herself and Capt. Phillips and jokingly said, "You no doubt have a formidable rogue's gallery by now, but on behalf of Capt. Phillips and myself I would like to make an addition."

At the British garden party special persons were presented to the princess by the retiring Ambassador Sir Peter Ramsbotham.

The farewell party for Sir Peter and Lady Ramsbotham was given jointly by the National Press Club, the Overseas Writers and the State Department Correspondents Association in the ballroom of the National Press Club. Sir Peter and his lady have been very popular here and it was a very special honor for the three press groups to share in giving them a farewell party.

So even after 200 years the Americans still curtsy to the British, imitate some of their fashions, and give special salutes to their ambassadors — and why not? The statue of Sir Winston Churchill plus cigar stands with one foot on American soil and the other on British soil in front of the British embassy in Washington.

Plains has changed, locals lament

PLAINS, Ga. (NEA) — Mr. and Mrs. John McElroy say there are many reasons why they have decided to sell their home and move out of the most suddenly famous community in the Old South.

The tourists are everywhere. The streets jam from dawn to dark. Perfect strangers knock on the door in the middle of the night and ask to use the telephone. But more than this, the McElroys are getting out because, as he says it, the townspeople "have become greedy," and, as she adds, "they've turned into snobs."

Dozens of similarly disgusted residents agree that Jimmy Carter's friends and neighbors have changed for the worse. Backbiting has set in. Cynicism is rampant. In a boondocks town where discretion was once a sacred code, gossip is the new sport: have you heard that Jimmy won't hardly even speak to Billy these days?

Locals insist the village was once the friendliest place in Georgia. No more. Grumps Mrs. McElroy: "I use to go to the store and have them slice bologna to any thickness I wanted. Now they won't slice it at all. They won't even talk to me anymore." She concludes that "everyone is too busy trying to get rich" on Plains' notoriety.

Apparently, much of the social deterioration has to do with money. Long-time resident Maxine Wiggins, who has taken to selling square inches of peanut land for $11 a plot, says fame has divided the town into hostile factions: on the one side there are those who profit from it, and the other side is composed of those who want to profit.

Clashes between the factions grow more frequent and intense. McElroy, who once earned a quick $300 by selling individual peanuts in plastic cases, says he also has an ideal property for a souvenir shop, "but the city council won't allow it." Why not? "Because most of them sell souvenirs now, and they want to hoard the business."

Hoarded or not, the business is brisk in Plains. One family has opened an ice cream counter and charges 65 cents a dip. The friendly old pharmacist now sells gaudy gimmicks at prices higher than his prescriptions. Several stores stock a new rage called the Pet Peanut, which is just a peanut in a box retailing at a sharp $4.

Indeed, for backland folk, Plains' entrepreneurs are anything but reluctant to push. The Lions Club sponsored a "Peanut Tennis Classic" for the end of April, "100 yards from Jimmy's home," and nobody is thinking small. Box seats sold for a flat $100 per ticket.

John McElroy...he wants out (for a price)

Of course, not everyone has become money hungry here. Ernest Turner's hardware store has a sign in the window proclaiming: "This is the store that didn't change." Residents say Turner has been known to ask tourists if they are interested in tenpenny nails, and, when not, show them politely but firmly the way to the street.

Yet if Turner has retained the old values, Billy Carter is the other side of the coin.

"People in Plains are fed up with Billy," says Maxine Wiggins, perhaps because he leads in the profiteering. Mrs. Wiggins says Billy recently "went out and paid cash for a new Cadillac," a most conspicuous vulgarity for a good old boy.

No one begrudges Billy a little profit, says Mrs. Wiggins, "but he has handled himself badly." She says residents were particularly annoyed when Billy demanded $10,000 for an appearance at a cancer benefit in Naples, Fla. "The money was for cancer, and he didn't even blink about it! The old Billy wouldn't have done it."

Others in town are not so sure there ever was an "old Billy." Black people say he has "been spittin' out words like nigger and coon" since he was a boy. One of his employes says he treats "everyone" in a contemptuous manner. "He's always been a big buffoon," says John McElroy's wife, only now he's become internationally famous for it.

And Billy isn't the only Carter undergoing re-evaluation here. Hugh Carter, the president's cousin, advertises his antique store on an area radio station, and so disgruntled residents say he is feeding the fires of tourism. Says one city councilman: "Hugh says he doesn't like tourists; you can never believe what that Carter says."

Even Lillian Carter is not free from the gathering scorn. Maxine Wiggins reveals: "She can be very nasty when she wants to be." One story is the president's mother once greeted a tourist with a loud "Don't you touch me!" and then proceeded with additional comments that stunned the tourist and others who were in her party.

Peevishness of this sort is gripping Plains like July humidity, says Mrs. Wiggins. Neighbor has been set against neighbor, insider against outsider. The strains in Plains are showing. "Poor Jimmy," says Wiggins, "I know he hates to see this, but what can he do?"

Well, John McElroy knows what to do. Move. He has placed his frame house on the market. He says this town is simply "too full of greed for me anymore." Incidentally, McElroy bought his home in 1974 for $13,000; his asking price now is "$50,000, at least."

South wins the heart lead and sees that his contract will be a cinch if diamonds don't break 4-0.

A careless South will lead a low diamond toward dummy at trick two. East will win with the ace and return a spade and South will suddenly discover that his contract won't come in.

A careful South will see that an immediate lead of the diamond queen will guarantee the contract against any defense and any combination of adverse cards.

East can't afford to win this first diamond because South can continue by leading a low diamond, ducking in dummy and winding up with four diamonds, three hearts and two spades.

So East must duck that first diamond. Now South has one diamond trick. He can abandon diamonds, go after clubs, and make three clubs, one diamond, two spades and three hearts.

Suppose diamonds break 3-1. South is now going to make four notrump. He will lead a second diamond and go after clubs after the defender with the ace of diamonds ducks, as he must.

A Massachusetts reader wants to know what action you take with:

♠ K Q 8 7 6 ♥ 2 ♦ A 5 3 ♣ A 8 6 4.

You simply overcall with one spade. A double is almost surely going to get your partner to bid hearts at some level.

Ann Landers

'Free spirit' needs love

Dear Ann Landers: I couldn't help but notice a letter to you from a fellow canine as I was rummaging through a neighbor's garage. I'd like him to know there are worse fates than being tied up in the backyard.

The irresponsible creep I belong to insists I'm a "free spirit" and should have the run of the neighborhood. What he doesn't know is that a dog who is on the loose has a rough time. He must contend with cars, kids and bigger dogs — in that order. Cars are our No. 1 enemy because they kill so many "free spirits." I got hit once and my owner said it was "a good lesson." Lessons are hard to remember when you are being chased.

Kids are next because they often tease. This bothers me, so naturally I snap back. Then the parents and neighbors get into the act. They shout obscenities and throw things. Sometimes they use slingshots and B-B guns.

Other dogs on the loose are a terrible problem — especially when they travel in packs. If they catch you in their territory they will tear you to pieces.

The security of my own backyard would be a welcome relief. Loneliness is a big step up from the harassment of the street.

When will people learn that dogs need people? I saw a bumper sticker the other day that summed it all up: "Leashed Is Loved. Unleashed Is Unwanted." — One Of The Unwanted.

Dear One: You certainly write well for a dog — better than a lot of humans. Thank you for letting us know how it is for man's best friend when he's allowed to run loose.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night was one of those rare occasions when my husband and I were invited to a really swell dinner party. The alcohol flowed like there was no tomorrow. Clyde is one of those people who can't say "No, thank you," when he gets around booze. He has to drink until he's dead drunk.

When Clyde gets plastered he becomes obnoxious, rude and belligerent. I was humiliated by his obscene language and the way he butted into every conversation.

When I finally got him to go home I took the car keys and luckily he didn't put up a fight. Getting out of the car he fell on the garage floor. When I tried to help him up he said, "Don't you dare," so I just stood there and waited for him to struggle to his feet. It took about five minutes. Then he put his hat back on his head and fell again. He had his good clothes on, which he ruined. I was disgusted, but said nothing.

Clyde has been an alcoholic for many years. I've begged him to get outside help but he insists he doesn't need it. Now I'm thinking of divorce. After 37 years, should I? — Fed Up

Dear Fed: Try Al-Anon. (It's in the phone book.) If, after six months of meetings, you are still "Fed Up" and Clyde has made no effort to dry up, make your decision based on whether your life would be better with him or without him. In other words, realign your priorities. Put yourself first for a change.

CONFIDENTIAL to Sunbonnet Sue In Sandusky: You've got bees in your sunbonnet, Susie. When a man pays a woman's rent, he has a right to expect "special favors." My advice is, find a cheaper apartment.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers's booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Foyt wins pole position

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — A.J. Foyt says he will just be conducting a 500-mile test Sunday when the two-time winner leads the field to the start of Sunday's $400,000 Schaefer 500, the second jewel in Indianapolis car racing's Triple Crown.

The 42-year-old Foyt, fresh from an unprecedented fourth Indianapolis 500 triumph, earned the pole position with a qualifying speed of 189.474 miles per hour in a "seasoned" Coyote racer.

"This car has a lot of miles on it. This is the one Billy Vukovich drove for me at the Speedway (Indy). It's the one I crashed at Trenton and Texas last year," Foyt explained.

The Coyote is outfitted with some experimental gear here, Foyt conceded. The only noticeable change from its Indianapolis trim is a new nose piece which has a front wing attached to it, to help give the car more front down force.

The Wildcats of Gordon Johncock and Wally Dallenbach, which Foyt calls Coyote copies, have had smaller, farther back airfoils parallel with the front wheels for several races now. Johncock starts fifth and Dallenbach 13th Sunday.

"This thing (new front wing) looked pretty good on paper, but the only test that means anything is on the race track under racing conditions," Foyt said. "That's one of the main reasons I'm running here, to test."

Foyt, who is leading the Indy circuit point standings, added, "I don't plan to go for the national championship this season. I'm not going to run all the races. I don't have enough race cars.

"I've got the one that I'm running here, and the one I won Indianapolis with, that I gave to Tony Hulman for the Speedway museum. And that's all."

Another driver testing experimental equipment in the race is Al Unser, the defending champion. Unser is wheeling a brand new Parnelli, powered by a V8 engine that started out as a Cosworth but is now called a VPJ.

This Parnelli is lower and thinner than the one he drove here last year. It was built in the last two weeks from the wreckage of a Parnelli that Unser hit the wall with at Indianapolis. So far it has shown "a lot of potential," according to Unser, who starts seventh.

The only other former Schaefer winner in the lineup is Johnny Rutherford, who is driving the same McLaren-Cosworth that finished last at Indianapolis.

Goettel wins again on his way to amateur golf championship

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Dennis Goettel of Carthage beat Jim Holtgrieve of St. Louis in a sensational round and he'll probably have to be just as brilliant Sunday if he is going to beat Bruce Hollowell, a veteran campaigner from Springfield, for the Missouri amateur golf championship.

Goettel, who is 6-7 and has his eye on the pro tour, again put his accurate short game to work on the back nine at the Country Club of Missouri and beat Holtgrieve 1-up in their semifinal match Saturday.

He used only 67 strokes and Holtgrieve had a 69 on the par 72 course.

Hollowell birdied three of the first nine holes and beat Brian Boudria of Jefferson City 3 and 2. Although a bogie on No. 9 left him only 2-up at the turn, Hollowell was practically assured of victory when Boudria bogeyed No. 13.

Goettell and Hollowell met head-to-head in a recent tournament at Kansas City's Indian Hills Country Club.

"I killed him," Hollowell joked Saturday.

"It was some fantastic golf," Goettel said.

Hollowell won on the second extra hole.

In Sunday's 36-hole contest between them, Goettel would seem to have a psychological edge. His game has seemed to fit the course's closely knit back nine like a glove and he won its recent Phil Cotton Tournament with a 7-under 67-70—137.

But Hollowell also has a fine short iron and putting game, and he won the state amateur in 1975. Goettel was runner-up last year.

Goettel had a stroke on Holtgrieve when they reached the turn Saturday, but only by reason of a great recovery on No. 6.

Ford gets 'head in one' with opening tee shot

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford, competing in the Vince Lombardi Golf Classic, hit his first hole tee shot to the left of the fairway Saturday and struck a spectator in the head.

Gene Bartelt, 58, was treated by medical personnel at the suburban North Hills Country Club, where the event to raise money for cancer research was held, before being taken to a nearby hospital.

Ford, whose shot went about 100 yards before striking Bartelt, told the injured man, "I'm very sorry." Bartelt did not reply at the time but quipped later at the hospital, "And I voted for him!"

Hospital spokesman John Hein said Bartelt suffered a cut on the top of his head which required six stitches. He was listed in satisfactory condition and was expected to be released Sunday.

Three-way tie for Open lead

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — The Butler National course spooked pacesetters with double bogeys Saturday in a wild third round of inconsistencies that left Tom Watson, Wally Armstrong and Tom Weiskopf tied for the Western Open lead, each with two-under-par 214s.

Watson, the leading money earner of 1977 who has won the Masters and two other tournaments this year, rattled around for a 75. Water cost him two strokes to par on the 10th and 13th holes.

Meanwhile, Armstrong, who never has won a tour event, and Weiskopf rallied with 69 and 70, respectively, to draw abreast.

A dozen players were separated by only two strokes, setting up a frantic finale Sunday for the $40,000 first prize.

One stroke from the leaders at 215 were Andy North, Gary McCord, Bill Kratzert, Johnny Miller and Dave Eichelberger.

At even par 216 were Phil Hancock, who was tied with Watson for the lead at 45 holes, then collapsed with double bogeys at the 10th and 18th for a 75; Mike McCullough with 74; J.C. Snead 72 and Rik Massengale 71.

Headin' for home

Philadelphia Phillies' Tim McCarver slides into home to score as St. Louis Cardinals' catcher Ted Simmons tries to put the tag on him in the second inning of the game Saturday. Umpire Andy Olsen calls the play. (UPI)

Royals, Cards win on homers

OAKLAND (AP) — Four home runs, including two-run blasts by rookie Joe Zdeb and Fred Patek, helped the Kansas City Royals defeat the Oakland A's 6-4 Saturday.

Zdeb's homer, his first in the major leagues, came off reliever Bob Lacey, who replaced A's starter Mike Norris with one out and a runner on first in the seventh and snapped a 2-2 deadlock. Patek hit his home run in the ninth after Dave Nelson doubled.

Starter Jim Colborn, 9-7, gave up a two-run homer to Tony Armas in the fifth inning and a two-run blast to Mitchell Page in the ninth before being relieved by Mark Littell.

Kansas City took an early 2-0 lead on a solo homers by Darrell Porter in the second and John Mayberry in the fourth.

After Armas' homer tied the score, Norris, 2-3, walked Pete LaCock to lead off the Royals' seventh and Fred Patek sacrificed to move him to second. Lacey got pinch-hitter Cookie Rojas, but then gave up Zdeb's go-ahead homer.

Colborn retired the first 10 batters he faced. Marty Perez singled with one out in the fourth inning and Jerry Tabb walked. Colborn, who struck out seven batters, got Earl Williams and Wayne Gross on strikes to end the inning.

With one out in the fifth, Page walked and Armas homered, his sixth of the season. The A's got a runner on third in the sixth inning when Tabb led off with a single, went to second on a balk and to third on a sacrifice. Colborn then got Gross and Manny Sanguillen on infield popups to retire the side.

The Kansas City pitcher ran into trouble in the ninth when Williams led off with a single and was forced at second by Sanguillen. Page then lined a homer into the right field bleachers, bringing on Littell.

The Royals reliever got pinch-hitter Willie Crawford on a grounder to end the game.

The loss was the ninth in the last 10 games and fourth straight for Oakland.

Cards 3, Phillies 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ted Simmons socked a two-run homer in the seventh inning off former teammate Steve Carlton, lifting the St.Louis Cardinals to a 3-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday night.

Simmons' blast, his ninth of the year, backed the combined eight-hit pitching of Bob Forsch, 9-4, and Rawly Eastwick. Forsch surrendered a solo homer to the Phillies' Mike Schmidt, his 19th of the year, in the third inning.

Carlton, 9-4, had limited St.Louis to three hits and enjoyed a 2-1 advantage going into the seventh. However, Hector Cruz led off the seventh with an infield hit and advanced to second on a throwing error. Simmons then pounded Carlton's next delivery high into the left field seats for the victory.

Second baseman Mike Tyson made a strong play to retire Bake McBride on a grounder up the middle in the first after Forsch surrendered a single to Schmidt and a walk to Greg Luzinski.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Torrez ended Boston's record 10-game home run spree while Mickey Rivers and Graig Nettles homered for New York, leading the Yankees to a 5-1 victory Saturday over the Red Sox.

Rivers unloaded against Luis Tiant, 5-6, to lead off the first inning and Nettles blasted a three-run homer as the Yankees scored four times in the fourth to take a 5-0 lead.

Cubs 5, Mets 4

CHICAGO (AP) — Doubles by Larry Biittner and Bill Buckner keyed a four-run ninth-inning rally Saturday to give the Chicago Cubs their fifth straight victory, a 5-4 decision over the New York Mets.

The Mets took a 4-1 lead into the ninth when Steve Swisher singled. Skip Lockwood retired pinch hitter Greg Gross, but Ivan DeJesus doubled. Larry Biittner then doubled off first baseman John Milner's glove to chase home two runs.

The Cubs tied the game when Buckner's long fly in left center dropped for a double when outfielders Lee Mazzilli and Steve Henderson collided.

Bobby Murcer was given an intentional walk and Jerry Morales also walked to fill the bases off reliever Bob Apodaca, 2-3. Manny Trillo then bounced to third baseman Doug Flynn, who stepped on third for one out. But his throw to first for an attempted double play was too late as pinch-runner Mick Kelleher scored.

Kathy Anderson to compete in first Jones Cup tourney

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. — Kathy Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Anderson, 905 South Carr, Sedalia, has been selected as a member of the U.S.A. Select National team to compete in the First Asian William Jones Cup basketball tournament.

She was one of 95 girls invited to the United States Olympic Training Facility to try out for an opportunity to represent the U.S. in international competition.

Of the 95, 12 were selected for the U.S.A. National Junior Women's team which will compete in the First Pan American Confederation Junior Women's Tournament July 5-10 in Squaw Valley. Teams from the U.S., Brazil, Canada, Mexico, Peru and Puerto Rico will compete.

The Select National Team, of which Anderson is a member, will train at Squaw Valley until July 17 and then will travel to Taipei, Taiwan for the Jones Cup games which will be played July 20-31. Teams from South Korea, Japan, France and Taiwan also will compete in the tournament.

The two junior teams are for girls 19-years-old and younger and mark the first step in the Olympic development of the U.S.A. Women's National Team for the 1979 World Championships, 1979 Pan American Games, and the 1980 Olympic Games to be held in Moscow.

Anderson is a 1976 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School and attends Central Missouri State University where she started as a freshman on the girls' basketball team.

Strong pitching spurs Cards' victory Friday

ST. LOUIS (AP) — If Eric Rasmussen can remain a model of consistency for the St. Louis Cardinals, what's wrong with his pitching teammates?

"You'd have to ask them," suggested Cards Manager Vern Rapp following Rasmussen's latest accomplishment, a 7-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies Friday night.

"When you're down five or six runs early it's pretty tough," mused Rapp, referring to St. Louis' pitching problems during a 2-7 swing to the West Coast preceding Rasmussen's five-hitter.

"I just think that he (Rasmussen) has good control of all his pitches," added the Cards' boss. "I think the key to it is that he got the five runs in a hurry and had something to work with."

St. Louis, outscored by 56-25 and outhomered 14-2 during its recent nosedive away from home, did not retaliate with big guns while beleaguering Philadelphia right-hander Jim Lonborg, 1-1.

Instead, Lou Brock coaxed a leadoff walk and promptly created pressure in the first inning by stealing second base for his 877th career theft.

Garry Templeton then slammed a single to score Brock, Tony Scott followed suit with a hit off Lonborg's glove and the runners executed a double steal as Hector Cruz struck out.

Ted Simmons was intentionally walked to fill the bases, Keith Hernandez singled home two runs and Mike Tyson duplicated Hernandez' feat after Ken Reitz' hit brought about another bases-full jam.

Rasmussen, bolstered by the 5-0 lead, responded by retiring all Phillies batters through the first four innings except for exCardinal Bake McBride and fanned four in a row preceding Ted Sizemore's two-out single in the fifth.

Cards trade Clarence Duren to Chargers

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have traded safety Clarence Duren to the San Diego Chargers for a fourth-round, 1978 National Football League draft choice, the Cardinals said.

Duren, 26, a product of the University of California, was a starter for three seasons with the Cardinals after signing as a free agent in 1973.

Last season, the 6-foot-1, 190-pound Duren was the backup for Cardinals' strong safety Ken Reaves.

Previously, St. Louis obtained safety Neal Craig from the Cleveland Browns and cornerback Perry Smith from the Green Bay Packers in offseason trades.

In 4-hour thriller

Connors finally beats Smith

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors, in and out of trouble all day, finally overcame the stiff challenge of another former champion, Stan Smith, and joined three other American men Saturday in the quarter-finals of the centenary Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

Connors edged Smith 7-9, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 in a fluctuating, four-hour thriller that finally saw the 1972 All-England champion falter at vital points and throw away his chance for an upset.

Meanwhile, defending champion Chris Evert and Billie Jean King, six times the women's Wimbledon champion, both escaped trouble to advance to the next round and set up a quarter-final meeting of the top seed vs. the sentimental favorite.

The other American men who made it to the quarter-finals were 18-year-old John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y., Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y., and Billy Martin, 20, of Evanston, Ill.

McEnroe, ranked No. 270 in the United States, downed Sandy Mayer, Mendham, N.J., 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1; Gerulaitis defeated Dick Stockton, Carrollton, Tex., 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, and Martin fought for four hours to dispose of the last British hope, Mark Cox, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 0-6, 9-7.

The men's quarter-finals lineup is Connors vs. Byron Bertram, South Africa; McEnroe vs. Phil Dent, Australia; Gerulaitis vs. Martin, and defending champion Bjorn Borg, Sweden, vs. Ilie Nastase, Romania.

Miss Evert fell behind in both sets—1-5 in the first and 0-2 in the second—before rallying to beat South African Greer Stevens 8-6, 6-4. Ms. King rebounded to oust Marise Kruger, another South African, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

The women's quarter-final lineup has Miss Evert vs. Ms. King; Virginia Wade, England, vs. Rosie Casals; Kerry Reid, Australia, vs. Sue Barker, England, and Betty Stove, The Netherlands, vs. Martina Navratilova.

Smith, who has seen many lean years since his Wimbledon triumph, found his old form in fits and starts and threatened to oust Connors, the 1974 champion.

For long spells Smith scored regularly with his first service and looked capable of winning. But there were fatal periods in which his service lapsed, and that was when Connors came back.

The last game of the first set was as good as any Smith played in his heyday, when he was the top player in the world. He hit a superb running forehand pass and passed Connors twice more for a decisive service break.

The match flowed back and forth to two sets all, but Connors took a 2-0 lead in the final set and Smith's brave bid appeared over.

Suddenly, though, Smith leaped to life again, collared Connors' service and raced to a 3-2 lead. The 8,000 fans at Wimbledon's No. 1 court were all for Smith and the excitement reached fever pitch.

Serving for a 4-3 lead, Smith hit a tremendous ace and reached 40-30. Then he unaccountably failed with two simple volleys and lost the game.

They were the last of many vital mistakes by Smith. Throughout the match, Smith missed chances to upset the man he has not beaten since 1974.

This time, Connors was in the mood to finish off his man and he won the last two games, dropping only three points.

McEnroe joined a small band of players who have reached the Wimbledon quarter-finals after playing through the qualifying tournament.

"I didn't even imagine I would get through the qualifying and make the tournament," McEnroe said after eliminating Sandy Mayer with the best serving and volleying of his life.

The day's most gallant loser was Tim Gullikson, the righthanded half of the Onalaska, Wis., twins. After his third five-set marathon in successive rounds, he was ousted by Dent, who won 6-3, 3-6, 9-8, 1-6, 9-7.

Borg, the defending champion, overcame Wojtek Fibak of Poland 7-5, 6-4, 6-2; Nastase came from behind to defeat Tom Okker of The Netherlands 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, and Bertram ousted Kim Warwick, Australia, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5, in the other men's fourth-round matches.

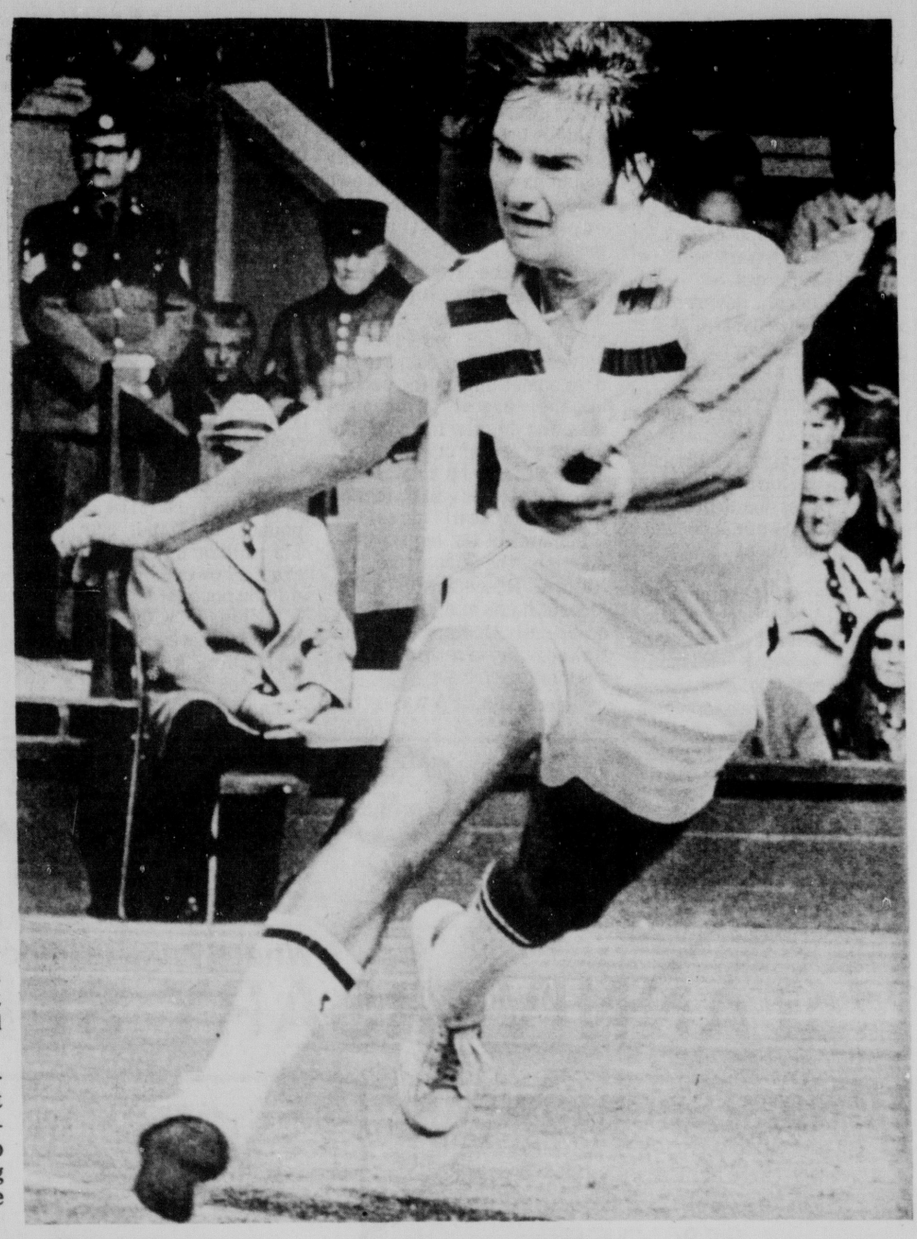
In women's matches, Miss Barker downed Lea Antonoplis, Glendora, Calif., 6-0, 6-4; Mrs. Reid beat Kathy May, Beverly Hills, Calif., 6-2, 6-1; Miss Stove downed Australian Helen Cawley, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3; Ms. Casals beat Linky Boshoff, South Africa, 8-6, 6-3, and Miss Wade beat Mariana Simionescu, Romania, 9-7, 6-3.

Miss Evert, who had lost only seven games in three previous rounds, found herself struggling in cold, threatening weather Saturday. In the early stages, Miss Stevens took a series of points by hitting in front of Miss Evert, who seemed uncomfortable at the net.

But Miss Evert finally showed the form that has made her the No. 1 female in the world, getting out of trouble by saving two set points at 1-5, taking the lead at 7-6 and taking the first set.

Miss Stevens immediately broke Miss Evert in the second set for a 2-0 lead, but the champion tied it with a break of her own. Miss Evert finished the 10th game with a backspin forehand that just cleared the net and dropped dead.

Ms. King, making her major tournament comeback at Wimbledon, recovered quickly after losing the first set to Miss Kruger. Back in winning form, Ms. King lost only one game in the final two sets.



Tracy Austin

14-year-old super kid is Wimbledon favorite

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "Alice in Wonderland."

"Super Kid."

"Little Miss Marvel."

British journalists pulled out all literary stops Saturday in singing the praises of tennis' 14-year-old wonder child who became the youngest ever to play in the 100-year-old Wimbledon championships.

Attired in a too-big white dress with a blue bow tied in the back, wee Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills, Calif., bowed 6-1, 6-1 to defending champion Chris Evert on center court Friday.

The fragile-looking, 90-pound twig of a girl lost the match but won the centenary Wimbledon. It's been years since anyone created a greater sensation or a stronger ovation.

Everybody loved her, but none more than the purple phrase makers of the English press.

"Alice in Wonderland came to the centre court yesterday at centenary Wimbledon," wrote Peter Wilson of the Daily Mirror. "It was as though one of the original Tenniel illustrations to 'Alice' had stepped out of its frame."

Ian Branes of the Daily Express called her "Miss Marvel" and said: "She hits the ball— double-fisted on the backhand and ferociously on the forehand—like the champion she will surely be in the 1980s."

Laurie Pignon of the Daily Mail had his story headlined "Tomorrow's Girl Arrives", reporting: "Tracy Austin gave tennis a glimpse into tomorrow's world."

Tracy shared block-letter headlines with the announcement that the Duchess of Kent was expecting another child at age 44.

"Ta-Ta, Tracy, But You'll Be Back!" Said one 72-point streamer.

"A Shirley Temple in tennis shoes," added a caption.

Lance Tingas of the Daily Telegraph wrote: "The rigour of Miss Austin's game was awesome in view of the slight body from which it came. One can only assume that in the normal course of events she is likely to be a champion, because already she is phenomenal."

David Irvine of the Manchester Guardian said the crowd "left convinced that as surely as Wimbledon is 100 years old, they had seen a future women's champion."

And from the pen of the Times' Geoffrey Green, who referred to Chris Evert as "the spider who frightened little Miss Muffet away," came this comment:

"Unless one is widely wrong, this little Miss Muffett, with her coltish legs, her hair bunched and her teeth in braces has the future in her hands ... her time will come ... it may not be too far distant."

I can't look!

Chris Evert of the U.S. and Ilie Nastase of Romania just can't bare to watch as they cover their eyes during the exciting match between Jimmy Connors and Stan Smith Saturday in the men's singles at Wimbledon. Connors (top right) edged Smith 7-9, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 and 6-3 in a four-hour thriller. Connors joins three other American men in the quarter-finals.

EPA checking water quality

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is now monitoring the quality of drinking water in Missouri, according to a spokesman for the state Department of Natural Resources.

The federal government, under the Safe Drinking Water Act, assumed control of program after Missouri refused to adopt regulations requested by the EPA, Everett C. Baker said Friday.

The General Assembly considered a bill during the recent legislative session to bring the state into compliance with federal regulations. It was not approved.

The federal government had proposed $470,000 for the state to implement the program and offered to give Missouri primary control of it.

But Senate President Norman Merrill, D-Monticello, said the proposal was rejected because the state eventually would have had to use its own money to administer the more complex and stringent program.

"I think the Missouri Senate is starting to say, 'If you're going to do it anyway, why should we get ourselves involved? If you're going to impose something on the people, let the federal government take the blame for that imposition. And if our bill is going to have to be as stringent as theirs, let the federal government do it,'" he said.

Because of the legislature's inaction, the Department of Natural Resources is losing federal funds and will be forced to cut 22 employes, said Baker, an environmental engineer.

He said the EPA was setting up an office in Jefferson City but probably won't be able to implement its program for several weeks.

Tart cherry crop better than 1976's

WASHINGTON (AP) — This year's crop of tart cherries, favored by many people for piemaking, is expected to be much larger than last year's short harvest but still well below past standards.

The Agriculture Department forecasts tart cherry production at 211.1 million pounds, up 47 per cent from 145 million in 1976. The 1975 crop, however, was 290.5 million pounds.

Michigan, which accounts for about three-fourths of the production, is expected to produce 165 million pounds, up from 90 million last year.

Motherly concern

First Lady Rosalynn Carter shows concern about the size of a piece of cake daughter Amy is cutting in the naval housing apartment she and Jimmy occupied in 1949 and 1950 at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Looking on are Candace and Richard Dylla, present occupants of the home. Mrs. Carter and Amy visited the apartment Friday on the second day of their three-day visit to Hawaii. The cake was baked by the crew of the USS Bryce Canyon, the ship which Dylla is assigned as a mess specialist second class.

Missouri Senate staff told to draw up rules

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Senate staff has been directed by a Senate committee to draw up rules outlining the proper use of Senate equipment and funds by staff members.

The action by the Accounts Committee on Friday followed a report by Gene Boesch, administrative assistant to Democratic Floor Leader John Schneider, on instances last year when Senate funds and facilities had apparently been used. Boesch cited the use of Senate printing facilities, postage, supplies and telephones by an aide to then Senate President Pro Tem William Cason to promote passage of a citizens' initiative proposal prohibiting utilities from charging customers for the cost of facilities until they are in operation. He said after formally presenting his report that there was nothing improper about the situation at the time.

Boesch said, however, no total on the cost to the state of that operation had been obtained. He also said neither Cason nor his aide had been contacted about the matter.

He said the information had been gathered while he was conducting an investigation for an ad hoc Senate panel, looking into the propriety of $2,000 in telephone calls charged to taxpayers between Senate President Pro Tem Norman Merrell and former Shelbina beautician Carlene Orr.

While the information on use of Senate facilities has no direct bearing on the Merrell-Orr inquiry, Boesch said he felt it should be turned over to the panel as soon as it was uncovered because of its significance. There have been charges that the Senate aide, who was fired earlier this year by Merrell, was responsible for the initial reports on the Merrell-Orr phone calls, but the aide has denied those allegations.

Woman found in K.C. home was strangled

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A 62-year-old woman whose body was found Friday under a bed at her home on the city's near east side apparently had been strangled, police said.

Alberta G. Waldron, a widow and a nurse at the Kansas City Public Health Clinic, had been reported missing Thursday.

Her body was discovered by a relative who had flown in from Philadelphia to help search for her.

There were no signs of forced entry, but police said the victim's purse, gold rings, gold watch and two pistols were missing.

Tests were scheduled to determine if Mrs. Waldron had been sexually assaulted.

Police had searched the two-story house Thursday after a friend first reported Mrs. Waldrom missing, finding nothing.

Praying mantis actually preying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The praying mantis would be better named a preying mantis, says National Geographic, referring to the insect's predatory habits.

Although it is harmless to humans, an adult mantis gobbles up flies, boll weevils, locusts, crickets, wasps, beetles, and grasshoppers. In addition the female often devours the male after mating, says Geographic.

Because of its dining habits, it has gained a new popularity among gardeners as nature's answer to pesticides. While stalking its victims, the insect waits patiently with its long forelegs raised, ready to strike. This "prayerful" posture gave it its name.

AMAZING BUT TRUE

Yes, we started 2½ years ago with $10,000. Last year our sales were over 5 million. Based on our current sales, early and in our 4th year, our sales will be over 10 million for the year.

We now have regional offices in St. Louis, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Chicago, Louisville, Atlanta, Memphis, Dallas, Detroit and Houston. Next month we are opening in Florida.

We have just introduced a new product and our sales have increased 30 to 40%. This obviously means that our new product is 30 to 40% more saleable than the product that caused all this. This also means 30 to 40% pay increase for our sales people who now average $30 to $40,000 per year.

We have no competition, we offer a guarantee draw, Blue Cross - Blue Shield and a paid vacation. And obviously a company with our gross, offers excellent opportunities for advancement.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SEN. FRANK CHURCH (D.-Idaho)

How do senators and congressmen, who don't pay into Social Security, draw its benefits? —Mrs. Mildred Dennis, Mooresburg, Tenn.

● They do not draw Social Security benefits as a result of their Congressional salaries. Instead, members of Congress (as well as all other Government workers) contribute to a separate Federal retirement plan, instituted before Social Security, from which their pensions are drawn. Most members of Congress worked in Social Security-covered employment before their elections and therefore may be eligible for its benefits.

FOR KAREN LOGAN, basketball star, Utah State Univ.

Do you feel that playing basketball detracts from your femininity? —D.B., Easton, Pa.

● Playing any sport can detract from one's femininity if one allows it to. Femininity is an attitude about oneself that does not have to be sacrificed on or off the court. Traditionally, women athletes have subjected themselves to the idea that athletes are masculine. I personally refuse to accept or live by such an outdated belief.

FOR STELLA STEVENS, star of the movie Sharpies

Of all the VIP's you've met, which ones have impressed you the most? —H.R., Washington, D.C.

● There are three: Salvador Dali because he's such a genius and so way-out that I'll never forget him; Jacques Cousteau because his conversation was so fascinating — I could have listened forever; and Burt Reynolds — for obvious reasons.

FOR CLEVELAND AMORY, founder of The Fund for Animals

Which country has the best record for humanely treating animals? —Winnie Mann, Los Fresnos, Texas

● Many would qualify, but there are ironies: Denmark, which has a good law against cruel animal-lab experimentation, nevertheless bashes whales to death near shore; Norway, especially kind to cats and dogs, clubs baby seals off The Front in Newfoundland. I think the British Isles have the best record. Dick Martin, who, as Member of Parliament, had the first anti-cruelty law passed in 1876. His traditions continue.

FOR IRVING MANSFIELD, widower of novelist Jacqueline Susann

I'm about to start my first book and wonder whether there's hope for budding novelists? —Phyllis Kolber, Chicago, Ill.

● There certainly is. Do you realize the top three novels in publishing history were by women, and all were first attempts: Valley of the Dolls, by Jackie; Peyton Place, by Grace Metalious; Gone with the Wind, by Margaret Mitchell. In fact, when I make my lecture tour with Jackie's last book, Dolores, I want to encourage new writers, the way Jackie always did.

FOR CANDICE BERGEN, actress

Please settle a bet. How much time do you spend before the mirror each day getting dolled up? —L. V., Durham, N.C.

● Since I dislike applying makeup, and only put it on when I have to, I spend as little time as possible doing it. The whole business takes me between 10 and 15 minutes. I loathe applying mascara because it always gets into my eyes. Who wins the bet?

FOR EILEEN FULTON, star of As the World Turns

What do you do with unexpected visitors? —B.D., Parkersburg, W. Va.

● I go berserk and refuse to answer the door, so my husband does and says I'm in the tub or washing my hair and won't be out for hours. I love visitors, but they must call first. I want my house and myself to be shipshape. I'm a planner, and things must go the way I plan. If I don't plan for visitors, then I won't have them come.

FOR THE REV. REX HUMBARD

I'm amazed that wherever you preach your big family is always with you. How do you manage to keep them together? —Vicente Lasmarias, Oxford, Ohio

● We're together more than usual because we care about one another and love a lot. My wife [Maude Aimée] and I, our four children, two daughters-in-law and six grandchildren give respect and understanding, but, more than that, we share a mutual trust and faith in God. Today's problems are caused by moral breakdowns in the home. When moral fiber is restored, families are brought back together.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I heard a disc jockey say that "Amy (Show the World You're There)" was written by children. Is that so? —N.C., Fort Smith, Ark.

● Yes. The composers are Tom (12) and John (11) Keane. They wrote the ballad to tell the President's daughter she can be of help to her father. The boys grew up in a music world. Their dad, Bob Keane, once owned a Los Angeles record company. Dad boasts that they showed promise at 4 and 3. When Tom was 5, the brother act was born. He picked out piano chords and wrote his first song, "Love Is A Charm."

What prompted you to write your book? —S.S. Albany, N.Y.

● During the Watergate hearings in 1973, some Doubleday editors were watching Senators Sam Ervin and Herman Talmadge. They were impressed by their courtly manner, their command and use of the language, all but concealing minds that were as sharp as steel traps. They decided they wanted a book on that breed of man, a history of the Southerners in the U.S. Senate, and they asked me to do it.

PRO AND CON

Are Our Immigration Laws Fair?

PRO Leonard F. Chapman Jr. Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization

Yes. The United States has the most liberal immigration policy of any nation. Current law permits 290,000 immigrants into the U.S. annually, plus an unrestricted number of aliens who are husbands, wives, children and parents of U.S. citizens. Thus, total immigration is nearly 400,000 yearly. There are no racial or religious bars, and all countries are treated alike, but one needed revision in the law would prohibit employers from hiring illegal aliens, who are taking jobs in greater numbers than are legal immigrants and who are making a farce out of immigration laws.

CON H. Edward Juarez, president of the International Immigrants Foundation

No. Immigration laws are regulations which mostly affect new immigrants. Under these regulations family bonds can be broken by separating parents from their children. Also a child who is a U.S. citizen could be separated from a parent who is not. Furthermore, a planned revision in the law would prohibit the hiring of illegal aliens. This would constitute a breach of the right to hire and also would result in the worsening of social tension for the simple reason that suspicion will be directed toward persons of foreign bearing, look or accent. Don't forget, we Americans are all children of the immigrant spirit.

DOLLY PARTON WANTS A NEW IMAGE

The reigning queen of country music now wants to become America's number one all-around entertainer.

By Carol Botwin

Haloed in a spotlight, shimmering in a pink pants outfit studded with rhinestones, is Dolly Parton, the reigning queen of country music. She is doing her stuff onstage—the stuff that makes her records climb to the top of the charts and packs in audiences from coast to coast. The spotlight follows Dolly's tiny, voluptuous form as she struts back and forth on four-inch heels, wide hips swaying, blond hair swinging, crying out the pleas of a woman whose man is being stolen. The song is "Jolene," one of her all-time favorite hits, and in the second chorus, members of the audience who have listened to her record of it time and time again join in.

Now Dolly gives her fans more of what they want—other familiar favorites like "Coat of Many Colors" and "My Old Tennessee Mountain Home" —before she dares to launch into some of the new material she is trying here in a small California coastal town in a bid to widen her audience. The song she and her new slick backup musicians swing into is a rock number from New Harvest, First Gathering, the first album that Dolly Parton has produced herself. The song, with its heavy, insistent beat, is not what Dolly is known for, not one of the country tunes she composes easily on buses and in motel rooms late at night. It is not what her fans have come for, but from the back of the auditorium come the hoots and hollers that mean they also like Dolly when she is doing rock.

Dolly is relieved; she has been nervous about her new material. She flashes one of her brightest, sweetest smiles at the audience and, at the end of the performance, invites them to come to the stage door for autographs. They come in droves, bringing children, friends and spouses, and Dolly patiently scrawls her signature on bits of wrinkled paper and on the backs of envelopes.

The appreciation of fans is genuinely important to her and always has been since she was introduced to the world of country music in 1967 by Porter Wagonner, a long-time favorite of the Nashville crowd. He heard a young, blond girl straight from the isolated mountains of Tennessee and recognized in her voice and in the songs she composed something special. He hired her to appear on his syndicated television show, and Porter and Dolly sang so well together that audiences began to fantasize that they were married.

Today, however, Dolly is no longer content simply to be one of the nation's most successful country singers or to be linked professionally to anyone. Having racked up two best-female-singer-of-the-year awards from the Country Music Association, having learned from repeated appearances on Johnny Carson's show that she can capture mass audiences just by talking, Dolly is now after what Cher and Tony Orlando and Dawn have—across-the-board stardom.

She has split with Porter Wagonner and has replaced her old country-music musicians—which included some members of her own family—with a sophisticated noncountry group. She has hired a high-powered Los Angeles management firm to guide her—the same company that was the behind-the-scenes mentor in the professional lives of Cher and Tony Orlando and Dawn.

Dolly Parton is after a new image. But to look at her, in a motel room overlooking the famous hills of Hollywood, you would never know it. It's 9:30 A.M., and even at this early hour she is wearing long false eyelashes, and a curly blond wig.

She knows the exaggerated bouffant wigs she wears onstage and off are no longer in style. She realizes the paint and powder and eyelashes are sometimes out of place, but she wears the whole array even to the supermarket. "I owe it to my public," she rationalizes.

"Besides, I've always loved garish things like flashy clothes and jewelry. One of the main reasons is that I grew up very, very poor. There were 12 children in my family. We didn't have anything we wanted and barely what we needed, so I used to be impressed with anything that glittered; in my mind it really was gold. As a little girl I used to think, 'When I get rich I'm going to have shiny cars and diamonds and pretty clothes.' Children's dreams. So now I am living out those dreams. I'm like a child dressing up."

As far back as she can remember, music was an important part of her life. Dolly's grandfather was a mountain preacher, and everybody in the congregation took turns on the guitar. In church Dolly learned to love music and perfected her talents. She also learned that music was a retreat when the going got rough.

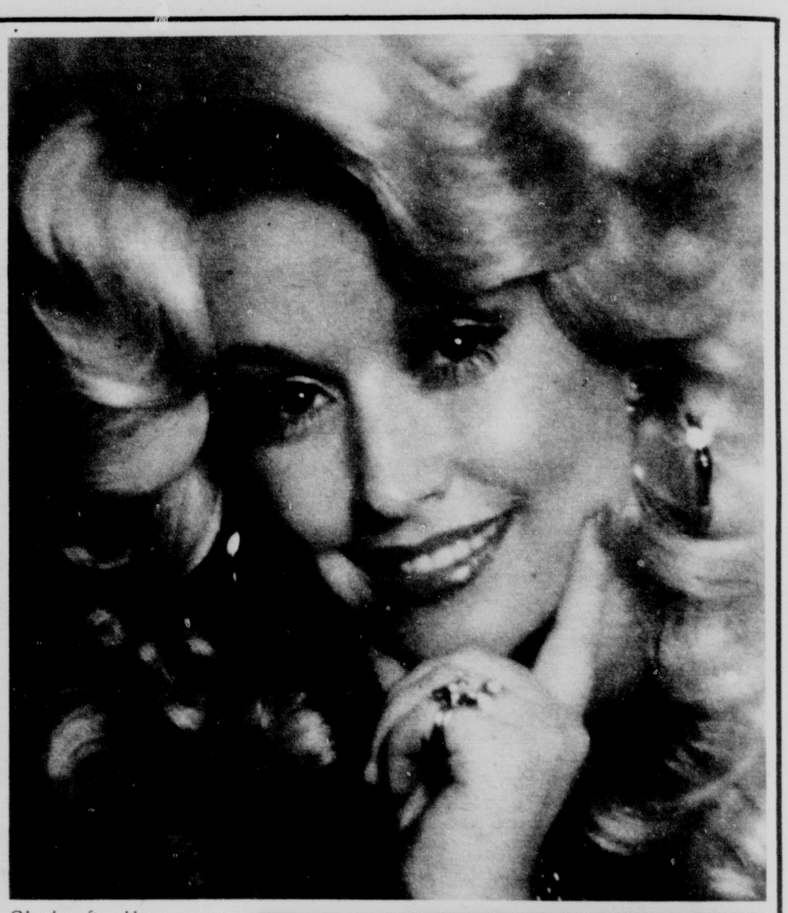
"If I didn't like things in the world I was living in," she says, "I would make up another world in songs. I became whatever I was singing about. Because I was always singing and composing songs, my uncle Bill Owens, who played the guitar, took an interest in me. He lived 40 miles away in Knoxville. He took me to radio and TV stations, and by 10 I was staying with my aunt and uncle in Knoxville during the summer, singing on local stations."

Dolly went through high school — the first in her family to do so — not because she was a good student (she admits she wasn't) but because she felt that if she didn't have the discipline to go through those four years of schooling, she wouldn't have the perseverance needed to attain her goal—to become a singing star in Nashville.

"I graduated school on Friday, and Saturday morning I was on the bus," she remembers. "I left so quickly I had to take dirty clothes with me. I didn't have that many clothes, so the first day in Nashville I went to the Laundromat. I got me a cola and started walking down the street. Being straight from the country I still spoke to everybody. In the country if you don't you're a snob. So this fella hollered at me, and I hollered right back. We got to talking, and then he came to my uncle's house where I was staying. In the country you don't go out with a fella, you invite him over at first. My aunt worked as a waitress, and my deal was that I would baby-sit for her. But on Thursday she was off, and so I had my first date. Two years to the day that fella, Carl, and I were married."

Dolly rules children out for now. She'd rather dream about writing stories for them—something she wants to do in the future. "I hope someday I'll be the new Mother Goose. I never got enough personal attention when I was a child. Not enough caressing. How can you pick up 12 children? So I want to write loving stories for other kids that need caressing in their lives."

How can you resist a woman who thinks like that? FW



She has fired her managers, replaced the man who discovered her and axed her back-up band, which included brothers, sisters and cousins. Whatever the cost, it seems, Dolly is determined to shed her country stereotype and to become a superstar in the world of rock and pop music.

Carol Botwin is a free-lance and has written for a number of national publications, including Family Circle and The New York Times Magazine.

How to Wake Up the Financial Genius Inside You

"Millionaires Are Not 100 Times Smarter Than You, They Just Know The Wealth Formula"

Millionaires are not 100 or even 10 times smarter than you. But it is a fact that millionaires are making 10 to 50 and even 100 times more than you.

Are these wealthy people working that much harder than you? No way!

If you are working only 20 hours a week, it would be physically impossible. (There are only 168 hours in a week, no one gets more.)

These questions used to really stump me. That was six years ago.

My wife and I then lived in Denver, Colorado, at 2545 South High Street. We paid $135 a month rent for a cramped, tumbled down house. My wife was expecting our second child and we were flat broke. I felt desperate and forced into a corner. I had to borrow $150 from my father and another $150 from my father-in-law just to buy the groceries and pay the rent. If that wasn't enough, I was several thousand dollars in debt.

Things are much different now. Last year I could have retired and lived off the income of my one million dollars in real estate holdings. (Incidently, almost all of the income from the real estate is tax free).

Since I had worked 20 to 40 hours a week, I know that I didn't work even 10 times longer or harder than you. And with my C-average from Ames High School (located in Ames, Iowa). I'm quite certain that I'm not any smarter than you.

If hours, efforts, or brains are not what separates the rich from the average guy who is swamped with debts and very little income, then what is?

I learned the answer to that question from an old fellow in Denver. This fellow worked in a drug store stocking the shelves. Very few people knew that he had $200,000 in the bank, all of which he had earned starting from nothing.

Within a year after meeting him, I was told and shown the same thing by a young man who had recently earned over a million dollars. By this time, I began to realize that what I was being shown was truly a remarkable and workable way to grow rich.

I began to apply the principles and methods I had been shown. The results were amazing. I couldn't believe how easy it was, if fact it seemed too easy.

Why is millionaire HAROLDSEN willing to share his wealth formula?

But then I met an elderly lady (83 years old) who, although not very smart, has made $117,000 using the same formula.

I then figured my beginning wasn't luck.

For three and one half years, I worked hard to refine and improve on the formula that I had been shown, so that it would be easy to get quicker results.

As I did this, my assets multiplied very rapidly (160% per year) to the point that I didn't have to work any longer.

I guess I am bragging now, but I did start spending alot of time in our back yard pool, traveling around the country, and doing a lot of loafing.

Then one day a friend asked me how he could do what I had done.

So I began to outline the formula that I had improved to show him really how simple it was, and how he could do the same thing.

By the time he approached me, I had written almost a complete volume on the easy way for him to copy my results.

I wrote this in simple, straightforward language so anyone could understand it.

This time my friend's questions were very specific. (He had already begun buying properties with the formulas I had been giving him). Now he had a property he wanted to buy, but was out of cash. How could he buy it?

I not only showed him how to buy without cash, but by the time the deal was complete, he had $5,000 cash in his pocket to boot.

I also showed him how to buy a $26,000 property for $75 down.

You, or anyone, can do exactly what I did, or my close friends have done; in fact, you may well do it better. (I began doing this in my spare time only).

It doesn't matter where you live or the size of your town or city, my formula will show you exactly how to:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.
- Begin without cash.
- Put $10,000 cash in your pocket each time you buy (without selling property.)
- Double your assets every year.
- Legally avoid paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at 1/2 their market value.
- Allow you to travel one week out of every month.

When you send me a check or money order for $10, I will send you all my formulas and methods, and you are free to use them anywhere and as often as you would like.

Now, if you were a personal friend of mine, I know you would believe me and not need any kind of guarantee, but since you don't know me personally, I will guarantee that you will be completely satisfied and that my formula will work for you if you apply it. I will back up that guarantee by not cashing your check for 30 days, and if you for any reason change your mind, let me know and I will send your uncashed check back.

You may well ask, why am I willing to share my formula for wealth? Well, because many of you will probably seek further consultation and direction from me as your wealth rapidly grows and my consultation fee of $75.00 an hour adds to my fortune.

But you shouldn't care if I profit as long as you profit. And I guarantee that you will.

By the way, if you feel a little uneasy abount sending me a check or money order for $10.00, simply post-date it by 30 days which will completely eliminate your risk.

You Don't Pay 'til The Fat Goes Away

Now, if you can lick a stamp—you can lick your weight problem!

Here's a diet that'll cost you about a dime a day—and if you don't lose weight, you can't lose money!

Because Northwestern Pharmaceuticals will not deposit your check or money order for four weeks after your order is mailed. That'll give you plenty of time to receive it, try it—and see for yourself that it really works for you.

If—for any reason—you're not thrilled with the results, your uncashed check or money order will be sent to you by return mail!

Here's why Northwestern dares to make this unusual guarantee:

In the first place, it's a proven product. Northwestern's Weight-Loss Plan has been on the market for over 12 years. Hundreds of thousands have tried it, and if you have any questions about its safety or potency, Northwestern urges you to check with your doctor.

It's a different product. Northwestern's Weight-Loss Plan is different—and effective—in all these ways:

First—It's your plan . . . your age, your height, your weight, and how much you want to lose . . . these things are all taken into account when you select your Plan!

The truth is that if you need to lose 50 pounds, you need a different kind of diet than someone who needs to lose 10. And you get it.

Second—You choose the foods you like best. Most diets fail because they're so limited or tasteless that you start cheating. Then you get discouraged and give up—or go on a real food binge. Northwestern expects you to cheat. Their plan allows you to treat yourself to satisfying amounts of such foods as pie with cream topping, pastries, ice cream sundaes, cheesecake, waffles with maple syrup, nutty brownies, mashed potatoes and gravy, creamy salad dressings, milkshakes, creamed vegetables, chili con carne, chow mein, beef stroganoff, and fried chicken!

Northwestern's Plan not only "allows" these diet breaks—they actually include the special, delicious recipes!

Third—Your diet is automatically "adjusted" . . . as your weight goes down. You don't follow a 500-calorie or a 1000-calorie diet. In fact, you don't count calories at all! But as you reach your weight goals, you "automatically" eat less—and keep on losing weight.

Fourth—You'll lose . . . without starving! Follow the Plan and you don't ever have to leave the table feeling hungry!

You can even eat out or go on a picnic—and no one will guess that you're "dieting."

Fifth—It's inexpensive! You get everything you need to know and everything you need to take to lose weight quickly—and safely. Tablets that supplement food and safeguard your health, but play no role in weight loss, are included at no extra cost. And the cost is about a dime a day!

How much weight you lose and how fast you lose it obviously depends on you, but here are some excerpts from unusual letters:

Teenager lost 14 pounds
"I am sixteen years old and have been on the diet for two weeks, and have lost fourteen pounds."

'Lost 18 pounds'
"Without the fear of getting off my diet or nervous tension, I have lost 18 pounds. Thanks to you, I look human again."

'Lost 13 pounds in 3 weeks'
"Your diet plan is wonderful. Have lost 13 pounds in 3 weeks."

'Wonderful list of foods'
"I have enjoyed being on your diet, and the results have been more than I expected on a diet of this nature, that includes such a wonderful list of foods. I was getting desperate, for I found I could not leave food alone. Now I'm back in my size 9 again."

'You don't get hungry!'
"I started 30 days ago. At that time I weighed 197 pounds. Today I weigh 186 pounds. I feel much better and everyone tells me how much better I look.
"P.S.: Your formula gives you so much to eat that you don't get hungry."

Mother lost 37 pounds
"My mother took them for 6 months and is down to 138 pounds. She weighed 175. I would like to order."

Lost 30 pounds in 2 months
"I lost 30 pounds and 2 dress sizes with a 2-month supply. It was out of sheer desperation that I answered your ad in the Chicago Sun-Times. Believe me, I will be eternally grateful."

'Easiest way to lose'
"It is the easiest way I ever lost weight. I have lost 37 pounds."

'Weight stayed down'
"I lost 30 pounds in only 12 weeks of following the plan and after four more months I have not gained any of it back. I had tried every other diet in the past 20 years and this is the first time my weight stayed down after losing."

And Northwestern is so sure their Plan will work for you that they won't cash your check 'til you're sure. You can lose weight—can't lose money. Why not fill out and mail the coupon right now?

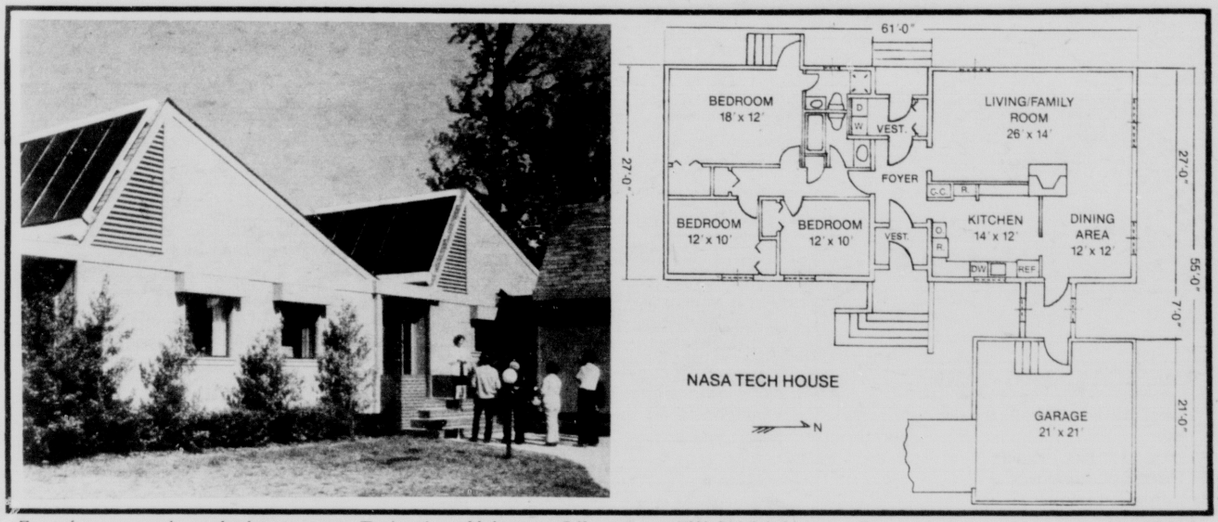
SPACE-AGE SOLAR-POWERED HOUSE THAT CAN SAVE YOU MONEY

It's from NASA and has dozens of innovations developed in the space program, many of which you can now incorporate into your present home.



NASA

For information about the house write: Technology Utilization Office, Dept. FW, NASA-Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va. 23665.

By L. B. Taylor Jr.

Many people think that with every passing year owning their own home is more and more out of the question. And people with their own homes are even wondering how long they will be able to afford modernization and rising fuel costs. The answer to these concerns may be the new "Tech House," developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at its Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va.

Filled with "spinoffs" from space research and development — everything from solar energy collectors to a microwave oven—the house is so efficiently designed and built that studies show it will save homeowners more than $20,000 in operating costs over a 20-year mortgage period. All the built-in technological miracles are either on the market today or will be commercially available within five years. And as all the innovations become available, NASA estimates the cost of the house will be about $45,000.

Representatives of NASA, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the National Association of Home Builders Research Institute, the Bureau of Standards and the Consumer Product Safety Commission identified new technology and guided the design of the house. It contains 1,500 square feet of living space—three bedrooms, a living room with fireplace, a dining area, a kitchen, two bathrooms, a laundry room and an attached garage.

The most striking feature of Tech House is the solar collector system — 384 square feet of flat-plate, fluid-type solar panels on the sharply slanted roof. The panels face south for maximum exposure to the sun and are used in combination with nighttime radiators and a heat pump to supply virtually all requirements for space heating and domestic hot water.

The cooling system uses the same equipment as the heating system, except that the night radiators on the garage roof replace the solar collectors. These radiators face north, and as the hot water from storage tanks circulates through them, heat radiates to the atmosphere, lowering the temperature of the stored water.

The beauty of the whole system, of course, is that the primary source of energy — the sun — is boundless and free. Solar collector panels are expensive (about $20 per square foot installed), but experts say the system will pay for itself in about eight years of use, without ever creating a fear of shortages or exorbitant prices during cold winters as do gas and oil.

The heating of Tech House is automatically controlled. By means of a computer program written to reflect a family's activities, the system only heats or cools the rooms being used.

Other designed features in the house take further advantage of the sun. A larger-than-normal roof hangs over the south wall, allowing the sun to enter the southern windows directly only during the cold weather months from October to March. The same overhang helps cool the house in the summer by keeping out sunlight.

To conserve energy further, the heat from such large appliances as the refrigerator, the oven and the clothes dryer is vented inside during cold weather and outside in the summer.

Even the fireplace has been modernized to make it more integral to the house's heating system. It is located near the center of the house, rather than at one end where it is inefficiently placed in most homes. Instead of using already-heated air from inside the room as conventional fireplaces do, fresh combustion air from outside is supplied by a duct directly connected to the firebox. This system significantly reduces heat loss up the chimney. Also, a double-walled firebox allows some escaping energy to be returned to the room. Finally, the temperature of the water in the underground storage tank can be increased by circulating the water through the fireplace grate, a coil through which water can flow. (Fireplace hot-water system costs about $100.)

Around the house, rolling thermal shutters (about $9 each) are built into the eaves over windows and can be activated from inside to keep out the sun during the summer. These shutters, designers say, reduce cool-air loss by 65 percent, with the added side benefits of security protection, light control, protection from flying debris during storms and noise reduction.

Outside doors ($180 to $200) are made of steel and packed with foam insulation, then sealed with magnetic strips. These doors cut heat loss by two-thirds over that of conventional solid wood doors and eliminate the need for storm doors.

Between the Sheetrock and the studs of the interior walls and ceilings, polyurethane sheets have been installed to prevent infiltration of air drafts. Sockets, switches and outlets also are sealed and taped, and, in effect, the entire house is contained in a plastic bag.

Selected interior and exterior walls of the house are insulated with a plastic foam—tripolymer (50¢ per sq. ft.)—which has the ability to "flow" into space around wires and pipes. This superior insulating material, another space-program spinoff, is nonflammable, nontoxic, odor free, rodent resistant and presents an effective sound barrier.

Another highlight of Tech House is its innovative water-recycling system (about $435), which cuts the water bill by more than 40 percent. This system stores 110 gallons of runoff water from sinks, showers and the washing machine. The water is run through a common, pool-type, filtration system, then used again in toilets. As a side benefit, a slight amount of detergent remaining in the recycled water helps keep toilet bowls clean.

Tech House has two domestic hot-water tanks located in the house-to-garage passageway. One tank contains a heat exchanger that uses solar energy to preheat incoming water to approximately 140° F. The heated water goes to the electric hot-water heater, then to the user.

In the kitchen, other NASA-developed technology eases the work of homemakers. For example, a heat-pipe, a device with no moving parts that uses capillary action of a liquid in a sealed pipe to transfer heat, is used for cooking roasts and defrosting foods. These cooking pins (about $10 each) or "super skewers," are excellent conductors of heat and can reduce cooking time and fuel use for roasts by up to 50 percent.

Here are some additional space-age features of Tech House:

- Emergency Lighting System ($35 per unit). Uses the high efficiency and long life of fluorescent lamps, which have extremely high light output for low energy drain. It uses low-voltage, high-frequency power generated by self-contained, solid-state electronic lamp drives, is powered by batteries charged with solar energy stored in a solar cell and is used during power failures.
- Fire Alarm ($30 to $35 per unit). Smoke detectors sense combustion products before humans can and sound a loud alarm.
- Temper Foam (about $10 for a slat cushion). Initially developed to pad astronauts' seats on long-term space flights, it provides unusual comfort for house seat cushions and mattresses. It contours to a person's shape and distributes the weight evenly over the contact surface. It also reduces fatigue as it absorbs 90 percent of impact shocks and vibrations, softens with increased humidity and transpires moisture away from the body for cooler sitting comfort.

L. B. Taylor was associated with the space program for a number of years and has written five books, including the soon-to-be-published Gifts From Space (John Day Co.).

These African daisies are made of batiste.

While many women are paying as much as $10 for one French rose to adorn a dress, or $30 and more for bouquets to spruce up their decor, you can create a gardenful of flowers at literally a fraction of the cost — and have a wonderful time in the process.

In fact, you can play Mother Nature by making your own wild roses, daisies, baby's breath, carnations and poppies. Our inexpensive, easy-to-follow patterns and instructions will show you exactly how.

The flowers are simple to make out of fabric you might have around the house or remnants available at the fabric counter in your local department store. You can use rayon, nylon, velvet, cotton or silk.

The trick is that the fabric is sized with a simple solution — you can mix it in a matter of minutes — which prevents the fabric from fraying and allows it to be cut out and shaped into lifelike petals.

Fabric flowers are easy to assemble and can be worn or used in the home to create arrangements or to complement dried bouquets. They're even handy for trimming extraspecial gift packages.

Observations™

Did you know that 20 million kids haven't been immunized against one or more of the well-known childhood diseases? That's about 40 percent of the children under 15.

Of those kids, 19 million are not immunized against polio. The number is going up, and could reach 20 million next year—unless parents do something.

What all this means is that the chances of serious outbreaks of disease—like polio, measles, German measles, and diphtheria—are going up rapidly.

Please, make sure your children get all the shots they should have. Check with your doctor or school health authorities. And ask your neighbors to do the same. You'll be helping all children.

We goofed. Remember, a few weeks back, when we compared the 56 words it took to write the Lord's Prayer and the 1,322 for the Declaration of Independence with the government's need to use "26,911 words to issue a regulation on the sale of cabbages"? We thought we had assurance of the regulation's existence, but it turned out we were misled. However, we can say with absolute certainty that there's an 11,400-word federal regulation on California-grown olives, and a 6,900-worder dealing with the peaches of Mesa County, Colorado. So our point—that too much of the national effort is going into long-winded, hard-to-understand regulation—remains valid.

"You mean they've banned everything?"

Your summer plans. They can be helped by a fellow named Howard Simons. He and his family took a 9,500-mile, seven-week trip across the U.S. during the summer of '75 and had a chance to contemplate the rich diversity of America. Simons decided that what this country needs is "a universal elixir concocted for mind and spirit." The result: a book of facts about sports and festivals, films and plays, architecture, national parks, bridges, ferries, music, beer, pets, and just about everything else. If you're traveling in the U.S. this summer—or staying home—Simons' List Book (a Fireside Book published by Simon and Schuster) will add to your fun. And, as we've said before, the 1977 edition of the Mobil Travel Guide can enrich your vacation with ratings on hotels, motels, and restaurants, and highlights of what to see. You can get more information about the guide from your Mobil service station, local bookstore, or by writing to Mobil Travel Guide, Box MT, at the address below.

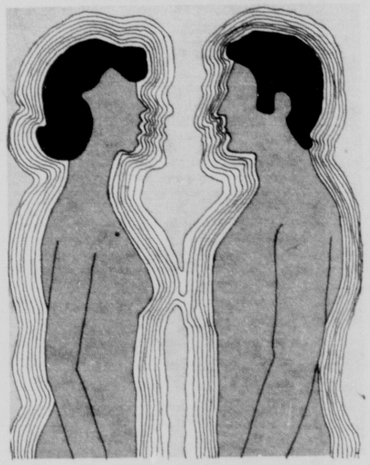
PEOPLE QUIZ/ By John E. Gibson

Is the way a man refers to the opposite sex revealing? Is your ability to communicate related to your personality?

THE HIDDEN MESSAGES THAT YOU CONVEY TO OTHERS

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How people react to us depends on the kind of image we communicate.
2. Your ability to communicate depends on your personality type.
3. Whether a man habitually refers to members of the opposite sex as "women," "ladies" or "girls" reveals a lot about his attitude toward them.
4. You make a better impression on people when you refrain from "talking with your hands," avoid prolonged eye contact (it makes the other person nervous) and only occasionally smile — unless there's something specific about which to smile.
5. We can convey many of our thoughts most effectively without saying a word.
6. Nonverbal language has many advantages over the spoken word.



ANSWERS

1. True. Studies conducted by investigators from the Universities of Nebraska and Montana showed that we project an image whenever we communicate with someone. For example, it's pointed out that "we have all met the 'know-it-all' who gives the impression that he knows all the answers and never has any doubts. Because he reveals an inflated image, he will repel many people; they will not trust him and will react negatively to him." On the other hand, many people were found to project a deflated image. A typical case is cited: the person who always begins his statements by saying, "You will think this is a dumb idea, but. . . ." This type is described as consistently projecting an unfavorable image. He may have some creative ideas, but because of his deflated image neither he nor others appreciate their worth.

2. True. Studies at Kent State University revealed that the best communicators — the people who "connect" best with others — are those who are open-minded, receptive to new ideas and concepts and willing to learn from others. The investigation demonstrated that "there was a significant negative correlation between communication skills and dogmatism."

3. True. Studies at the Menninger Foundation have shown that the man who habitually avoids the use of the term woman — referring to the opposite sex instead as either "girls" or "ladies" — displays a fear and distrust of women. The term girl "not only serves to avoid certain anxiety-arousing connotations inherent in the word woman regarding aggression, sexuality and reproduction, it also serves to impart a tone of frivolousness and lack of seriousness to ambitious, intellectual and competitive strivings that women may pursue." Similarly, the term lady connotes an absence of aggressive impulses. Ladies do not struggle with powerful or hostile drives or wishes, or at least they do not express them in a threatening (i.e., "unladylike") fashion. It's further observed that "terms like lady scientist and lady doctor seem to eliminate some of the anxiety associated with women who are successful and powerful in traditionally masculine pursuits — clearly ladies and girls need not be feared; they only need to be protected.

4. False. Ohio State University studies show that observations and ratings by more than 100 undergraduate judges were more favorable under conditions of increased use of gestures, eye contact and smiling.

5. True. Communication has been aptly defined as any behavior that carries a message which is perceived by someone else. Studies at Arizona State University provide graphic examples of how many of our ideas and feelings can be instantly conveyed without uttering a word. For instance, "A smile, a frown, a raised eyebrow or a manner of walking can convey volumes. A nod or shake of the head, a glance at one's wristwatch or at a clock on the wall, a clenched fist or closed eyes all send a swift and succinct message." Each of us attaches the same general meaning to the various expressive facial and body movements that make up our silent language. In short, you often can say a great deal more "without saying anything."

6. True. One advantage is that you can't be quoted. And there are some circumstances in which that assurance can be rather comforting. As Charles M. Galloway, professor of education at Ohio State University who has made an extensive study of nonverbal language, concludes from his findings: "Not only do words fail to carry the full meaning of what we say, they aren't as effective as nonverbal expressions. A head nod provides assurance. A warm glance expresses love. Focused attention suggests we are listening. A gesture qualifies a word. Eye contact closes interpersonal distance. Our actions speak so eloquently, words have to take a backseat."

Bells of Fine English Bone China

The American Rose Collection

A limited edition of 12 Fine English Bone China Bells to be issued under the auspices of The American Rose Society

Approximate size of bell is 4½" in height and 3" in diameter.

Fine English Bone China stands alone as representing the absolute finest of the china maker's art. And in the world of beautiful flowers, roses are the most beloved. To portray the exquisite and delicate beauty of America's most beloved roses in a limited edition collection of Fine English Bone China bells is an accomplishment worthy of worldwide collector interest.

At Last — Bells of Fine English Bone China

Fine English Bone China has become known as the rarest and best of all the fine china available throughout the world. By every standard used to judge excellence, it is unsurpassed. Its ivory-white color cannot be duplicated. Its light weight gives an impression of delicacy found in no other china. Yet, its strength gives it a durability that belies its delicate appearance.

To produce Fine English Bone China is an art that has been mastered by only a few master china makers. The home of most of these master craftsmen is Stoke-on-Trent, England, truly the Fine English Bone China capital. And it is in Stoke-on-Trent that the beautiful bells that make up this limited edition will be crafted.

Because Fine English Bone China is so difficult to make, and because the demand for the limited quantities that can be produced is so great, it is rare to find an exclusive, privately commissioned, limited edition bell collection made of this precious material. Literally years of careful planning and diligent work are required to make such bells a reality.

But, such bells are now, at last, available. The opportunity to acquire these bells is here, but for only a limited time.

Each Bell a Beautiful Work of Art

To create a bell collection worthy of Fine English Bone China, a specially designed bell shape was created. To produce this unique shape, each bell will be individually cast by hand. Then to complement the delicacy and exquisite beauty of each bell, original paintings of 12 of America's most beautiful roses were commissioned. In this way, each of the 12 bells in the collection colorfully portrays a different rose from the gardens of America. Therefore, the complete collection creates a bouquet of beauty that can be displayed proudly in your home.

Each Rose Beautifully Captured In Full Color

Each rose design is an original work of art created expressly and exclusively for this collection. The commission for the rose designs was awarded to two highly respected rose artists: Norman Langford of England and Allianora Rosse of the United States. Two artists were chosen so that a variety in artistic style could be given to the designs. Yet styles were chosen that were compatible with one another so that the 12 designs combine to make a unified collection. Each artist has captured in his and her own way the elegance of the roses with their beautiful array of colors. The efforts of these artists have combined to create a spectacular collection of America's most beloved roses.

To insure that the full beauty of the artist's original painting is faithfully captured on each bell, the fine skill of old world craftsmen, using techniques involving 20 separate colors, will be called upon. Each bell will be hand decorated and, as a final touch of luxurious elegance, precious 22kt. gold will be applied, by hand, to both the handle and base of each bell.

Issued Under The Auspices of The American Rose Society

Because of the significance of this limited edition collection, it will be issued in the United States by the Danbury Mint under the auspices of The American Rose Society. The Society is the oldest and most prestigious in the United States. For the first time since its founding in 1899, this distinguished horticultural organization has agreed to the issuing of a bell collection under its auspices.

Approximate size of bell is 4½" in height and 3" in diameter.

A Strictly Limited Edition

To maximize the heirloom value of this collection, it will be issued in a strictly limited edition, available only by advance reservation. In the United States, reservations for this collection of Fine English Bone China Bells will be valid only through July 30, 1977, and then the edition will be closed forever.

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Credit Card Do's and Don't's For Travelers

Summertime usually results in a rash of credit card losses and thefts, according to the leading manufacturer of credit cards. The company offers the following tips to credit card holders:

- Do make a list of all credit card account numbers and the telephone numbers to be called in the event of loss or theft. Don't keep that list in the same place as the credit cards.
- Don't carry cards in such a manner that they are easy prey for pickpockets, who are very busy during the summer season.
- Do check your credit cards before leaving home for such things as expiration dates to assure that cards will be valid during a vacation.
- Don't go home from a shopping trip without checking to see if you have all your credit cards.
- Do make sure after each transaction that you get your card back and that the imprinted sales slip is for the correct amount.
- Don't leave cards in a hotel or motel room if traveling; use the safe or safe-deposit box.
- Don't expose plastic cards to extremes in temperature. Leaving them in the glove compartment of a car on a hot day can cause the embossed letters to flatten.

How To Save Your Skin

What's the best thing you can do for acne? If the problem is severe, go directly to a dermatologist. If you feel you don't need professional help, here's a capsule course in dermatology. During hormonal shifts, the skin cannot easily dispose of the unusual amount of oil it secretes. Oil gets stuck on way to the surface, and bacteria finds trapped oil an invitation to be fruitful and to multiply. The result is infection, which in turn causes inflammation. Many dermatologists treat acne with antibiotics, but they aren't for everyone—or for anyone all the time. So what else can you do? Attack on all fronts. 1. Don't aggravate your oil problem by eating fried or fatty foods, or shellfish. 2. Help oil escape. Open up the floodgates with steam, hot water and abrasive cleaners. 3. Wage war on germs. Keep your hands and hair away from your face.

Knowing A Resort's Policy Saves Hassles

Is anything worse that having it rain during your seaside vacation? Well, yes. There's the full disaster when you decide to cut your losses by leaving early, then discover everything you didn't know about the hotel's deposit and cancellation policies. According to the American Automobile Association, many resorts 1) charge a "handling fee" for processing cancellations; 2) fail to mention in advance that their rules are for full payment upon arrival rather than at departure time; 3) keep your deposit if you cancel with less than, say, 30 days' notice—even if you made the reservation within that 30-day period; 4) do not refund deposits regardless of circumstances. If you get a written confirmation with no mention of a cancellation policy, what can you assume? Most likely, your deposit will come back if you give at least 48 hours' notice of cancellation. But in a dispute, the guest is left out in the cold without documentation. You should get as much as possible about the arrangement in writing.

The Right Way To Use Eye Drops

You can easily learn to apply eye drops properly by mastering a new technique. Called the "depot" method, it keeps drops on the eyeball up to 400% longer than other techniques and also allows more medication to reach the problem area, according to ophthalmologist Dr. Frederick Fraunfelder. Here's the technique:

1. Tilt your head back, grasp the lower eyelid with your forefinger and thumb and gently pull it straight out.

2. Roll eye upward to get the cornea out of the area of application.

3. Place drop in the pocket formed when you pulled the eyelid forward, thus allowing drop to be placed in the less-sensitive tissue which lines the eye. Right after placing the drop, look down to deepen the pocket.

4. Now, gently lift the lid upward and close your eye. Keep it shut for at least one to two minutes.

Summer's Here And 100 Million Bikes Are Out There

If you're a biker, these simple safety procedures can reduce bicycle accidents.

- Test brakes to be sure they work properly.
- Avoid situations that require hard braking on anything but hard, dry pavement.
- Equip bikes with a white headlight and a red rear reflector.
- Wear bright-colored clothing when biking during the evening.
- Do not wear loose clothing. A loose pants leg can easily get caught in the bicycle chain.
- Eliminate protruding objects on the bicycle.
- Check to see that the horn or bell can be heard at least 100 feet away.
- Obey traffic rules. The rules that make driving a car safe apply to safe bike-riding.
- Ride in the direction of traffic.
- Stop at traffic lights and stop signs.
- Don't weave in and out of traffic.
- Don't pass a stopped car on the right or bike too close to parked cars. The sudden opening of a parked vehicle's door can throw the biker off balance and beneath the wheels of another car.

Canine Calorie Counters

Now Fido can diet, too. Pet-food manufacturers have introduced products designed to help overweight animals slim down and stay healthy. Like diet foods for humans, the pet products are designed to overcome a lack of willpower—on the part of the master who can't cut back. The first entry in the market wasn't billed as a diet food; instead, it concentrated on what it called the different lifestyles and stresses of animals of different ages. But later products are advertised as "lower in calories." Statistics show that 72% of dog-owning households have animals 3 years old and older, 41% say their dogs are overweight, and 62% say they have dogs who get little exercise.

Quick Takes

Research at Cleveland State Univ. has shown that husbands often tend to show their affection through gifts or by doing odd jobs around the house. But wives tend to display affection through hugs and talking about their feelings. . . . Little Bo Peep of nursery-rhyme fame would have to work hard to lose her sheep these days, thanks to scientists at the Univ. College of North Wales in Bangor. They have come up with an electronic beeper to be attached to sheep so their wanderings can be followed. The name is Bangor Orange Position Estimating Equipment for Pastures—they call it Bo Peep. . . . There are more than 30,000 women doctors in the United States—about 8% of all doctors, according to a Wayne State Univ. survey. The study also found that about 67% of the women doctors were married—43% of them to doctors. . . . Some day coffee drinkers may find they are drinking their favorite beverage and receiving nutritional benefits along with it. Recent experiments by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture have shown that coffee is an excellent medium for supplying people with iron fortification. . . . Hamburgers are America's No. 1 takeout food—with the average family making 3.6 purchases from hamburger takeout stores a month, reports Institutions Volume Feeding magazine. Second most popular is doughnuts, followed by Mexican food and pizza. . . . American laws are lenient with drunken drivers, compared with those of other countries. In Turkey, drunk drivers are taken 20 miles from town and forced to walk back. In Malaya, the drunk driver is clapped in prison. If he's married, his wife is locked up, too.

The smoker's guide to low-tar cigarettes.

With all the controversy about smoking going on, lots of smokers are deciding to switch to low-tar cigarettes.

But which low-tar cigarette should a switcher switch to?

Well, here's an easy guide to follow.

First, there are those so-called new cigarettes claiming scientific breakthrough and hyped-up flavor. Unfortunately there's nothing very revolutionary about the way they taste.

Next there are those brands that promise nothing but low-tar numbers. They're fine if low numbers are all you want. Because their scientific filters work so well, they filter out most of the taste.

Fortunately there is an alternative. Vantage. The low-tar cigarette that's different from all the others.

From the very beginning Vantage was designed to deliver flavor like a full-flavor cigarette with less tar than 95% of all cigarettes. So forget all those empty promises and go with the real flavor of Vantage.

It will probably turn out to be the only low-tar cigarette you'll enjoy.

Regular, Menthol, and new Vantage 100's.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

FILTER: 10 mg. "tar", 0.7 mg. nicotine, MENTHOL: 11 mg. "tar", 0.7 mg. nicotine, av. per cigarette, FTC Report DEC. '76; FILTER 100's: 11 mg. "tar", 0.9 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette, by FTC method.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — After having my fingernails snag my hose many, many times I now put on an old pair of dress gloves before putting on my hosiery. It is a bit of trouble, but well worth it. — BRENDA.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for those who own cameras that develop pictures instantly. After finishing with the film and the shell is pulled out, it can be used as a picture frame. Slip the picture in the slot at the bottom very carefully and then the frame can stand by itself on a shelf or several shells can be arranged on the wall. — ROSE.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — If you have trouble cutting homemade noodles, try using a pizza cutter and you'll eliminate the separating of the dough. — PEGGY.

DEAR POLLY — I am only 12, but when I put a pair of slacks or pants on a wire coat hanger I first place a folded newspaper over the wire and then hang the pants over it. No more wrinkles. — MARY.

DEAR POLLY — When mopping the floor I put a degreaser in my pail of water plus ammonia and wax floor cleaner so the floors look and feel much cleaner. — DEBI.

DEAR POLLY — I like to be greeted by a pleasant odor when I open my closet door so I put one or two sheets of that new fabric softener in the pockets of my robes. On wash day I remove them and use them in the dryer. I put fresh ones in the robe pockets when they are dry. My closet always smells fresh and clean. — LEAH.

DEAR POLLY — If you are tired of having bacon curl up lightly dust it with flour before frying and find it will cook straight. — HAZEL.

DEAR POLLY — I hated to pack away my white ceramic Christmas tree that has small colored bulbs and a large bulb in the base, so I use it as a year-round decoration. I replace the small bulbs with small artificial flowers that I change according to the season and find it makes a very attractive decoration. — MRS. H.A.R.

DEAR POLLY — Pictures cut from a child's coloring book of animals can be used as patterns for decorations. — SUSIE.

DEAR READERS — They're so clear-cut and drawn with heavy black lines that tracing is made easy. I have found them most useful when making needlepoint designs. Lay the canvas on top of the drawing, and trace with a WATERPROOF pen. — Polly.
